Townsend Lieutenant Got $1,800 a Month, House Inquiry Is Told

San Francisco Pension Planner Revealed as Top-Salary Man.

Clements Is Vague On 'Book Economy'

Congressmen, Fearing OARP Power, Hope for Showdown.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A special House committee, seeking to learn what happens to the pennies, nickels and dollars rolling into the Townsend OARP treasury, heard late yesterday that one official in the organization has been receiving from $1,800 to $2,100 each month.

The official in question was not Dr. Francis E. Townsend, who conceived the idea of giving the "old folks" a $200-a-month pension, nor was it Robert Earl Clements, "co-founder" of the plan, who was the first witness called on Capitol Hill yesterday.

He was identified as Edward J. Margett, former furniture dealer, now a Townsend plan manager in the San Francisco area.

James Sullivan, counsel for the House investigating committee, had been asking Clements what he knew about Margett's "background." Clements admitted that he didn't know much about it before he employed Margett.

"Now this Margett," said Counsel Sullivan, "do you know how much he draws a month?"

"I don't know," answered Clements.

"Is it true Margett is receiving on an average of $1,800 to $2,100 every month?"

"I would prefer to give you definite information on that tomorrow."

Clements did say that Margett's office expenses had to come out of whatever amount he received.

Founders in Rift.

The committee, headed by Representative Joseph Bell (Democrat), Missouri, told Clements to appear this morning with all information concerning Margett's receipts from the Townsend treasury.

Clements, a thin, dapper individual, recently announced that he had resigned as national secretary of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., and Dr. Townsend echoed his announcement with a statement saying that Clements' action had his "hearty approval."

There was a hint in Clements' testimony that he and Dr. Townsend had not seen eye to eye on the profits of Margett. In answer to questions by Counsel Sullivan, Clements said he had talked to Dr. Townsend about Margett, and that he had made two suggestions:

First, that the Townsend clubs (one of which, the Los Angeles Club, has 22,000 members) be broken down into smaller units.

Second, that State area managers be placed on a straight salary. (Margett, it was explained, works on a commission basis.)

Salaries Face Inquiry.

How much Dr. Townsend and Clements have been taking out of the OARP till is one of the questions the answer to which will be sought before the investigation is over. Clements recently revealed that he and Dr. Townsend were each receiving $150 a week, plus expenses, but he would not talk about their profits from the Townsend National Weekly, which they own privately.

The committee expects to inquire into that, too.

Prior to the opening of the $50,000 investigation yesterday in the caucus room of the old House Of-

. . . from 1884 to 1935.

In 1884, the year following the passage of the civil service law, approximately 10.5 per cent of all jobs in the Executive branch of the Government were subject to civil service examination.

By 1924 this figure had jumped to 76.8 per cent, and in 1932 it climbed to 80.8 per cent.

BUT . . . in three years, from 1932 to 1935 . . . it dropped back to only 50.7 per cent. Not since the "horse and buggy days" previous to 1914 has it been so low."

Bill Rewritten, Tax Hearings Start Monday

Text of the sub-committee's tax bill report—Page 4.

By Robert C. Albright.

Completely rewritten and with revenue estimates sharply curtailed, the Administration's revenue plan came out of the ways and means tax sub-committee yesterday in a form still embracing revolutionary principles of corporate taxation and steeply taxing big business income, but providing shock-absorbing cushions for small earnings.

The report was immediately accepted by the Ways and Means Committee as a basis for hearings opening Monday. Speaking for the Treasury, Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering will be the first witness. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau may be called when he returns to town a week later.

Shorn of processing taxes, and closely cropped in revenue, the plan would raise $799,000,000 the first year and $616,000,000 thereafter. The President had asked $792,000,000 for the first three years and $620,000,000 thereafter. Thus a net revenue slash of $345,000,000 in the first three years is possible.

Republicans were quick to pounce on the plan as "political camouflage." Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, declared the measure "indirectly soaks the poor in the worst fashion of any suggested bill that has ever been before the country."

But Chairman Robert L. Doughton, taking the radio in continuation of the New Deal campaign to "educate" the country on taxes, declared the plan "is sound and worthy of acceptance, certainly of a trial." Doughton said the alternative of a general increase in the individual income tax rates "would be premature and unwise." The only other alternatives, he said, would be an increase in corporation income tax rates to 25½ per cent, or an increased tax on excess profits.

Mothers In Contest Get Finance Offer

Toronto, March 26 (AP).—Seven Toronto mothers today received letters signed by Benjamin S. Gore, Bristol, Tenn., attorney, offering, on behalf of an unnamed client, to finance them for the seven months remaining in the $500,000 Millar Baby Sweepstakes if they will contract to cede him 18 per cent of the Millar bequest.

The Will of Charles Vance Millar, Toronto lawyer, who died October 31, 1926, bequeaths $500,000 to the Toronto mother bearing the most children in the ten years following his death.

Battle to Let States Rule Aid Funds Mapped

Vandenberg Outlines Fight on $1,500,000,000 Bill in Senate.

By Felix Bruner.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who has been insisting upon an investigation of Federal relief activities, was planning yesterday to make a fight for decentralization of relief administration.

The Michigan Senator, who succeeded in preventing a further appropriation for the Florida ship canal, which was started with relief money, has outlined a plan of attack against the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation bill when it reaches the Senate.

Vandenberg will not object to an appropriation, but he is preparing amendments calling for distribution of the money among the States on the basis of population and need. The funds would thus be administered by the State governments rather than by the Works Progress Administration, headed by Harry L. Hopkins. Such a law would mean virtual abolition of the Hopkins organization.

Under Vandenberg's proposed plan, a study would first be made to determine the actual number of persons, employable and unemployable, on relief in each State. Next, a deterination would be made of the amount necessary for actual subsistence—food, shelter and clothing.

Money, distributed to the States on the basis of population, modified by any unusual conditions existing in particular States, would be sufficient to cover actual subsistence needs. States might then pay out the money as a direct dole, or they might add their own money to the sums supplied by the Federal Gov-

Railway Labor Act Clause Is Upheld

Topeka, Kans., March 26 (AP).—Federal District Judge Richard J. Hopkins upheld constitutionality of the railway labor act today in its prohibition of pay-roll deductions for dues to labor associations.

A suit, brought by the Association of Rock Island Mechanical and Power Plant Employes against Frank O. Lowden and other trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, challenged validity of the act which provided:

"It shall be unlawful for any carrier to deduct from the wages of employes any dues, fees, assessments or other contributions payable to labor organizations, or to collect or to assist in the collection of any such dues, fees, assessments, or other contributions."

Judge Hopkins ruled the act "constitutes a proper exercise of the powers of Congress," and that it "does not violate the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution."

NRA Is Kept Alive; Funds Are Allotted

Employes to Be Transferred; $100,000 Is Given for Work.

By Sidney Olson.

Keeping the last spark of the NRA alive by action less than a week before its formal extinction on April 1, President Roosevelt in an executive order released yesterday announced the formation of an organization under the Department of Commerce to be known as "The Committee For Industrial Analysis." He also made available $100,000 of Works Progress Administration funds for the committee's work.

This committee will continue unfinished analyses of the results and achievements of the old National Recovery Administration, and, under the chairmanship of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, will work with another new group, created in the same order, to be known as the "Division of Industrial Economics."

The announcement caused disturbance in some quarters, with speculation aroused by the nearness of the action to the unemployment relief message of the President, in which he told Congress that "under the NRA the Nation learned the value of shorter hours" in industry. It was in that message that he urged business to employ more men. The message was delivered on March 16, and March 21 he signed the executive order which was announced yesterday.

Will Transfer NRA Workers.

The employes of the NRA will be transferred to the new Division of Industrial Economics under a paragraph in the order making such employes "eligible" for employment therein.

Also on the committee which will "complete the summary of the results and accomplishments" of the NRA were placed Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The order adds, "Other persons outside of the Government subsequently will be appointed to the committee by the President."

There was no mention in the White House statement of new legislation, but officials indicated privately that new legislation was very possible.

The report recently made by the Maj. George L. Berry Council for Industrial Progress urged new NRA legislation, and the President has indicated that the Berry group should continue indefinitely, it is understood. A draft of an executive order continuing the council's existence is known to have been submitted to the President.

In his relief message to Congress seeking $1,500,000,000 funds, the President said of the NRA that "the public authority to require shorter hours agreed upon" by industries under the codes, "has been seriously curtailed by limitations recently imposed by the Supreme Court upon Federal as well as State powers."

Less Than Half Cut Standards.

In the one NRA report published thus far, studying the extent of industry's maintenance of code standards after the demise of NRA, it was shown that less than half of the industries had cut those standards in varying degrees.

While a majority of the work in separate studies of the NRA has been completed, or will be by April 1, it is believed, no comprehensive survey or summary has yet been prepared.

This will constitute the work of the new division under the new committee, which will assemble the statistical information and governmental records of industrial operations under the codes; study the effects of the codes on trade, industrial and labor conditions, and "make generally available information with respect to industry, particularly wages, hours, child labor and other labor conditions," states the order.

19 Are Killed In Smashups Of 2 Airliners

5 Perish When English Transport Ship Falls in Hampshire.

Nineteen persons were killed when two airliners crashed yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

Amecameca, Mexico, March 26.—Ten German tourists, on their way home after a Mexican visit, were among 14 persons killed today when a huge tri-motored ship crashed on the rock "saddle" between two volcanoes.

The four others were an aviation official and three crew members.

Hurtling down on the snow-clad bridge between Popocatepetl and Iztlacihuatl, the plane scattered its wreckage over the mountainous plateau, caught fire and burned the bodies of its passengers and crew.

Officials said it was the worst crash in the history of aviation in Mexico.

Three Titled Victims.

Six women were killed. Three of the victims were titled, a prince, princess and a baron. The Hamburg-American Line, which brought the tourists to this country, gave out this list of the German passengers:

Adolf Prince Schaumburg-Lippe Elizabeth Princess Schaumburg Lippe, Siegmund Baron Von Stieber, Frau Dora Thein, Fraulein Victoria Thein, Adolf Franz Igler, Fraulein Marie Margarethe Harder, Fraulein Elisabeth Schroer, Fraulein Liesbet Pust and Elmer Von Rohencly.

Twenty minutes later, observers in the little town of Amecameca, at the foot of Popocatepetl, watched the giant airliner falter as the pilot sought altitude to fly over the pass. Then they heard the motors miss fire.

A few minutes later, after the plane had circled the little mountain village twice, its pilot pointed toward Mexico City, but slithered down among the rocky crags of the saddle between the two famous volcanoes.

Technical Adviser Killed.

Among the dead was Adrian Barchers, pilot and technical adviser to Pan-American Airways, and three crew members—Rodolfo Limon, radio operator; Daniel Madrigal, steward, and J. Preciado Acosta, the pilot.

The first report of the crash came from the municipal mayor here, who telephoned bare details of the accident to Mexico City.

A few minutes later a searching party started for the saddle, discovered the wreckage and removed the bodies. Fire, which followed the crash, had destroyed the interior of the plane. The bodies were both crushed and burned.

Pan-American officials ordered a technical investigation in an attempt to determine the cause of the accident.

Five Killed in England.

London (Friday), March 27 (U.P.). Five were killed early today when an airliner crashed near Lyndhurst, Hampshire.

First reports said the dead included one woman.

The plane was owned by the Commercial Air Hire Co.

Cause of the accident was not known immediately.

Representative's Wife Fined $5 As Speeder After Secret Talk

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A lengthy, locked-door conference in the office of an assistant prosecutor and a hasty, rear-door exit through guarded gates started and ended (respectively) the Traffic Court appearance of Representative and Mrs. James A. Meeks, of Illinois, yesterday—but in the brief interim, Judge John P. McMahon found time to convict Mrs. Meeks of speeding and impose a $5 fine.

The locked-door conference was strictly private—by orders of Assistant United States Attorney Karl Kindelberger. And the rear-door exit also was private—by prearrangement with court attaches.

But the speedy conviction came in open court after Representative Meeks waived his Congressional immunity, agreed to a not guilty plea by his wife and took the witness stand to "present the facts" to Judge McMahon.

He told how Park Policeman B. J. Beckman stopped his car on Rock Creek Parkway Wednesday and asked Mrs. Meeks for her permit. The Illinois Democrat explained to the court he was in a hurry to attend a committee meeting at the Capitol and was delayed by the policeman's action.

Mrs. Meeks testified that she believed the Congressional tag on their auto was "all she needed to drive."

"I had been told that nothing more was necessary, so when the officer asked for my permit, I told him to look on the front of the car," she said.

During her husband's explanation to the court, Judge McMahon interrupted to ask:

"Do you offer this statement in extenuation—or an excuse—or is it a claim of privilege?"

"It is a statement of facts. I am here as an attorney to present the facts to you," replied Meeks.

"Do you feel your wife has any immunity because she is the wife of a Congressman?" McMahon inquired.

"I'm merely trying to present the facts."

"Are you claiming immunity?"

"No—I don't want to claim any technicalities. I'm not trying to take advantage of the fact I am a member of Congress," answered Meeks.

"Then, in view of the testimony, I'll impose a fine of $5," said Judge McMahon.

Meeks indicated, however, that because of the official nature of his errand—a scheduled apeparance before the House Rules Committee—some consideration should have been given.

"I don't believe in members of Congress flagrantly violating parking rules or flouting laws and for

Federal Wood Expert Urges That Wilentz Consent to Stay.

Says Kidnap Rail Not From Attic

Hauck Threatens to Ask That Court Compel Execution.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 26.—An authoritative source disclosed tonight that Arch W. Loney, Federal wood expert engaged by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman to study the Lindbergh kidnap ladder, telephoned Attorney General David T. Wilentz asking him to agree to a 30-day reprieve for Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Loney made the call a few hours after he and Gov. Hoffman returned to Trenton from the Bronx, where the Governor went today to inspect the attic of the house where Hauptmann lived before his arrest and from which, the State contends, rail 16 of the ladder was taken.

Loney told the Governor tonight he did not believe the rail came from Hauptmann's attic.

At the same time, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., Hunterdon County, threatened to take court action to compel Hauptmann's execution.

Saved Once Before.

Hauptmann, scheduled to die in the electric chair Tuesday night, was saved once before by reprieve. On January 16, the day before he was to be executed, the Governor signed a 30-day reprieve.

The Governor, conceding he has no further reprieve powers, said yesterday only the court of pardons or judicial intervention can save the convicted Lindbergh baby killer. If a situation warrants it, however, he said, he will ask the attorney general to join him in an application for a judicial stay of execution.

The attorney general, asked about the call from Loney, said he had "no comment" to make.

During the Flemington trial, Loney, then a PWA wood expert, telegraphed Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, he was willing to testify for the defense if he had more time to study the ladder. He said then he did not think Hauptmann built it.

Hauptmann's prosecutors and the Governor sharply disagreed on the results of the Governor's inspection of the attic.

The Governor issued a summation of the report, made to him by Loney, of the Department of the Interior, Washington, in which Loney said the examination "of the flooring with calipers showed a variation between ladder rail 16 and the wood used for the attic floor."

At the end of his long statement the Governor said his examination of the disputed board would be carried on further.

While the Governor was issuing his statement Hauck, who, with Wilentz and Arthur J. Koehler, Federal wood expert and major State witness, accompanied the Governor on his inspection trip, said the Governor's investigation "is not impartial and is very unfair."

Would Fight Reprieve.

Hauck said he would vigorously fight another attempt of the Governor to reprieve Hauptmann.

"The fact is his investigation is not impartial, and is very unfair," Hauck said. "He has constantly leagued himself with the defense and so far he has shown us nothing of importance that would lead us to believe Bruno Richard Hauptmann innocent, or that others have been involved in the crime.

"If it is his intention to grant another reprieve, I will take quick and necessary court action to block it. I feel he has made a laughing stock of the courts who have passed upon the legal questions involved in the case. I think the Legislature of the State of New Jersey should take cognizance of his actions in the cause of common decency."

Loney's report to the Governor said the test made in the attic showed the disputed ladder rail "to be about one-sixteenth of an inch thicker than the floor boards."

"Another point," said the Governor's statement, "brought out by the examination was that in all the boards in the floor of the attic there were only seven perpendicular nails driven, while in the disputed board from which the ladder rail is sup-

England Asks Reich to Ease Fears of War

Eden, in Stirring Speech, Reaffirms Nation's Locarno Support.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 26.—Anthony Eden, foreign secretary of Great Britain, called upon Germany anew to "do something to allay the anxieties of Europe" today in a ringing reaffirmation of Great Britain's obligations under the Locarno treaty in House of Commons' debate.

This reaffirmation means that Great Britain continues ready to fight for France and Belgium if they are attacked by Germany.

But in the strongest speech he has made since becoming foreign secretary, Eden asserted, "It is fantastic to suggest that we be tied to the chariot wheels of this or that foreign country."

He said that any new German proposals, which he declared were necessary, would be given a full and fair hearing by Britain. France, he demanded, must have an open mind as well. Germany, he disclosed, has refused to guarantee not to fortify the Rhineland.

The speech surprised political quarters by its strong talk to France as well as to Germany.

"I do not intend to approach the problems of the immediate future with the idea of being bound by divergent policies either to France or Germany," he asserted.

"Our policy is the Covenant and our membership in the League of Nations. We know our obligations and we are prepared to fulfil them, but what is uppermost in my mind and what I believe is uppermost in the minds of the great mass of people in this country is that we must persist in our search for peace on an enduring foundation."

The recent Locarno proposals, he told a packed House, came when

Men Fleeing Police Wreck Fruit Stand

A lad, who thought he was being cheated in a colored gambling establishment inthe 600 block of T street northwest, last night caused no end of confusion when he called police, telling them there was a shooting in the place.

Two score patrons of the establishment heard the radio call to scout cars and dove for the windows. There was a crashing of glass and then a series of thuds on the street level, one floor below.

Most of them had landed in a fruit and candy stand. Police arrived two minutes later to find a crowd of fleeting Negroes frantically wiping away chocolate, bananas, grapes and other such things as they ran.

Touhy Appeal Filed.

St. Paul, March 26 (AP).—Attorney Robert V. Rensch today filed an appeal from the Federal District Court conviction of Thomas Touhy for mail robbery. Touhy was sentenced to 23 years imprisonment last week for participation in a $76,000 postal holdup in Minneapolis three years ago.

Health Survey Will Be Asked Of Roosevelt

Public Meeting Denounces Conditions; 6 Speakers Score Low Funds.

By Gerald G. Gross.

President Roosevelt will be requested to order an impartial survey of Washington's public health establishment by the United States Public Health Service, by provisions of a resolution adopted last night at a public meeting sponsored by the District Tuberculosis Association.

After hearing six speakers, including two members of Congress, condemn existing disease prevention and hospital facilities as "disgraceful," due to the lack of adequate funds, the meeting unanimously adopted the resolution which would result in a study similar to the one conducted in 1927.

Dr. Prentiss Willson, one of the leader in the District Medical Society's campaign for ample public health appropriations, proposed the survey in his address. Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association, moved that the plan be embodied in a resolution.

It was provided that the study be completed an d its findings published in time to be sumbitted to the Budget Bureau and Congress before the District's 1938 supply bill is acted upon. The 1937 bill is now under consideration in the Senate, after having passed the House.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, pledged themselves anew to use all their power to restore Health Department and municipal hospital items eliminated from the present supply bill by the House. Public hearings on the measure are scheduled to be held the latter part of next week by the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, of which Capper is a member.

Without mentioning his name, Mrs. Norton, who is chairman of the House District Committee, assailed Representative Thomas L. Blanton, acting chairman of the District appropriations sub-committee that slashed the Capital's public health funds, as an obstructionist and said she was ashamed of the House for carrying out his recommendations. She said she is sure

Student Hazing Over R. O. T. C. Grades Bared

Dern Orders Inquiry When Told Penn State Boys Were Strapped.

Charges that Pennsylvania State College R. O. T. C. students, making the lowest scores in rifle practice, were forced to "run the gantlet" in which they were whipped by other students armed with brass reinforced cartridge belts, at the order of Maj. Arthur F. Bowen, of the R. O. T. C. staff at the college, were being investigated last night at the order of Secretary of War George H. Dern.

The matter was brought to Secretary Dern's attention in a letter from the committee on military education, of New York City, signed by Edwin C. Johnson, committee secretary.

The letter said that on December 17, 1935, Maj. Bowen, second in command of the unit at the college, ordered low-score students in several rifle-practice sections to run the gantlet of other students armed with cartridge belts.

Reports of the incident were published in the Penn State student newspaper, The Collegian, on January 7, 1936, and that an editorial in that paper on that day called the incident "shocking, disgraceful, storm-trooper sadism," and referred to the personnel of the military science and tactics department of the school as "feeble-minded jingoes" and as "thick-headed."

Student Tongue-Lashed.

One student, according to that report, refused to "participate in the mauling" and was "tongue-lashed" by an unnamed sergeant on duty with the R. O. T. C., who "proceeded to give him a lecture on the inadvisability of being a slacker in the Army."

An Associated Press dispatch from State College, Pa., the seat of the school, quoted Maj. Bowen as stating that a "paddle line" for low scorers in rifle practice was a voluntary proposition and had no connection with military discipline. He said that the "paddle line" was "just for fun" and that no student complained later, and added that most of the statements in the Collegian's article were "incorrect."

The letter called on Secretary Dern "publicly to repudiate as contrary to approved War Department policy the outrageous conduct of Maj. Bowen and his War Department associates" at the college.

It also demanded that the War Department investigate the incident thoroughly, "particularly to determine whether Maj. Bowen, on other occasions, has resorted to similarly brutal tactics for punishing students having low scores in rifle practice, and further, to ascertain the identity of the unnamed student who maligned the patriotism and courage of the student who quite properly refused to respond to Maj. Bowen's command."

Charges Are Urged.

In addition, the committee's letter urged that charges be preferred against Maj. Bowen for conduct unbecoming an officer and to discipline any others connected with the incident, with penalties inflicted by court-martial "upon those found guilty of the flagrant breach of military discipline which has been committed."

Well-known names on the committee's letterhead include those of Oswald Garrison Villard, formerly editor of The Nation, and Noman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President in 1932.

Secretary Dern, not commenting on the letter, referred the investigation in routine form to Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, commander of the Third Corps Area, at Baltimore. The routine investigation will require a report from Col. J. F. Venable, head of the R. O. T. C. staff at Penn State. If Col. Venable's report warrants, a special investigator will then be sent to the town of State College, Pa., to gather further facts.

Article Copy Inclosed.

A copy of the report in the Penn State Collegian, inclosed with the letter to the War Department, said in part:

"At the beginning of one of the classes, the students were enlightened to the fact that the two having the lowest score in the target practice would have to run the gantlet. After the barrage had subsided and the scores were tallied, Maj. Bowen . . . commanded: 'These two men were low. Take off your belts, gentlemen.'

"The rest of the section, which numbered 75 or more, formed a line around the Armory floor and the low scorers' part of the ceremony was to run along that line while those forming the gantlet helped along with swinging belts. The staccato of the belts that found their mark resounded most loudly when the punished slowed down to round the corners.

"One student, a conscientious objector to this particular phase of M. S. & T., refused to participate in the mauling. When it was observed that he was not helping, a sergeant of the military department proceeded to give him a lecture on the inadvisability of being a slacker in the Army.

"* * * Although the practice was continued throughout most of the classes that day, Maj. G. M. McMullin told his students it would not take place in his classes, since it did not seem to him a fitting military action.

"One objector pointed out that although his eyes were not fitted to perfect marksmanship, they still were good enough to read page 87 of the R. O. T. C. manual, which states: 'The true method of establishing military discipline is by reliance upon the pride of the soldier; by appeals to his common sense; by treating him as a human being and not as a machine, and by force of example.'"

Pennsylvania State College is a land-grant college, and thus R. O. T. C. training is compulsory. A total of 2,496 students are enrolled in the R. O. T. C. department, with nine other officers ranked below Col. Venable and Maj. Bowen, according to War Department records.

Mr. Johnson, signer of the committee's letter to Maj. Bowen, said in a statement to the press:

"By an odd coincidence, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood was testifying before a Congressional committee on December 17, 1935, the very day that Maj. Arthur F. Bowen, of the Pennsylvania State College R. O. T. C., was ordering students having low scores in rifle practice to run the gantlet composed of other students equipped with their brass-reinforced cartridge belts.

"It will be of interest to many citizens to learn what action, if any, the War Department will take with reference to the obviously more flagrant breach of military discipline committed by Maj. Bowen."

Chamber's Bid for Talk by Secretary Roper Puts Administration on Spot.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE decision of the United States Chamber of Commerce to invite Secretary of Commerce Daniel Calhoun Roper to speak before its annual meeting next month, although previously it had been decided not to have any of the New Dealers participate, places the Roosevelt Administration on the spot.

The subject assigned to Mr. Roper is "How Business Could Adequately Meet the Suggestions of President Roosevelt in His Relief Message." Now, that is putting the problem squarely up to the Administration!

In his recent relief message to Congress the President undertook to lay the responsibility for continuing relief expenditures on private industry, asserting that "it is the task of industry to make further efforts toward increased output and employment . . . I present this problem and this opportunity definitely to the managers of private business."

But how? is the question. No industrialist objects to increasing his output and employing more workers, provided he can sell at a reasonable profit what he produces. Industry today is literally clawing the earth in an effort to increase its sales—and the only reason why a given plant is operating only 60 per cent of its capacity is because it cannot find a market for a greater production.

Why not shorter hours, without any decrease in wages, New Dealers ask. Surely, they assert, employment can be increased in that manner. One need not have a higher mathematical education than simple arithmetic to know that shorter working hours at the same wages actually means increased wage rates, which means increased cost of production.

There are some industries enjoying sufficient margins of profit that they could pay larger wages without raising the cost of their product, but they are not many. So, any increase in the cost of production necessarily means increased prices, which discourage rather than inspire consumption. Thus forces are set in motion which will curb the demand and thus further reduce output.

Although it is easy enough to assert that it is industry's responsibility, that is the dilemma confronting industrialists who examine the question. They know well the truth contained in the words of Hugh Bancroft, then president of Dow, Jones & Co., when, in a speech in 1931, he said: "People who employ others will not, and cannot, employ others except at a price that yields the employer a profit . . . no employer can pay his workmen more than the economic worth of his service; if he tries to do it, the end is bankruptcy and no jobs . . . the economic worth of such service is finally determined by the customers, in the price they are willing to pay for the product."

So the chamber of commerce decided to ask "Uncle Dan" Roper to come over and tell them how to do it. The executives of that organization take the attitude that business and industry are willing and anxious to cooperate, if only someone would tell what could be done—that, having struggled with the problem for five years, the only way industry knows is to rely on the natural recuperative forces now at work in the Nation.

The President has come to the aid of "Uncle Dan" by naming him and two other Cabinet members as a "committee of industrial analysis" to complete and analyze the summary of results and achievements of the ill-fated NRA. Perhaps out of that mass of data, Secretary Roper may get a constructive idea.

Action of the Federal Reserve Board in promulgating marginal requirements governing bank loans for the purchase or carrying of stocks has no immediate significance. The action constitutes, however, a safeguard for the future—a rain shutter—which may be very important should an excessive credit inflation develop. It is another brake on the speculative use of credit and, therefore, is an important step in the field of money and banking.

One of the remarkable facts about the current stock market boom is that it is being carried on in large part with cash. Although stock prices in the last year have increased from 50 to 75 per cent and in some cases as much as 100 per cent, brokers' loans have not shown any substantial increases—up about $225,000,000, the latest figures for the country showed. Bank loans on securities—to others than brokers—in the last year have declined by approximately $128,000,000.

Under the new rules no bank after May 1 will be permitted to lend more than 45 per cent of the current market of stocks when the purpose of the loan is to purchase or carry such stocks. At the same time the reserve board simplified the previously issued marginal requirements for brokers by applying to them the same regulation, effective April 1.

At present the brokers have been operating under a rule which permitted them to advance credit to the extent of 45 per cent (originally it was 55 per cent) of the current market value of securities or 100 per cent of the lowest market value in the preceding three years, provided that the credit advanced was not more than 75 per cent of the market value.

Credit advances by brokers and dealers on present accounts are reported to average throughout about 50 per cent of the current market value of the stocks held as collateral, so that the new regulation means a tightening up of marginal requirements. Meanwhile, brokers are enthusiastic over the abandonment of the present complex formula requirement.

Dispatches from New Jersey report that James Greenwell, 27-year-old WPA "worker," although in jail for the last month serving a 60-day sentence in lieu of a $50 fine for driving an automobile with illegal license tags, has regularly received his relief check. Two WPA checks for $24.50 each have arrived, said the warden. But Greenwell has not used the money to pay his fine.

The possibilities of this incident should not be overlooked by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins. Why not send relief checks to everyone in jail? It would greatly simplify the task of spending money—which sometimes seems to be the chief Hopkins objective.

Senate, F. C. C. Seek Dismissal Of Wire Suit

Urge Court to Deny Hearst Injunction; Seizures Are Defended by Minton.

The Senate Lobby Committee and the Federal Communications Commission moved yesterday to block an injunction to prevent seizure of telegrams in connection with the lobby investigation. Both filed answers in the District Supreme Court to a suit brought by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, to prevent seizure of messages passing between him and his employes.

The Senate committee, through its attorney, Crampton Harris, asked that the injunction suit be dismissed on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction over the activities of the Senate or a Senate committee. The Communications Commission held that the Hearst petition was insufficient and that examination of newspaper telegrams was not a violation of the constitutional guarantee of the freedom of the press.

In the Senate, Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, attacked Hearst and defended the activities of the commission, which has been charged with aiding the Lobby Committee in obtaining copies of private telegrams.

Seizure Defended.

"This defendant's authority and duty to examine messages of newspapers or newspaper publishers, when a proper occasion arises," the Communications Commission told the court, "is not a violation of the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States nor any other provision of law, for the reason that the first amendment guarantees only against suppression or restraint before publication."

In behalf of the Senate committee of which Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, is chairman, Harris listed 27 reasons why he contended that the court had no jurisdiction. In two separate pleadings he asked that the suit be dismissed and that an injunction be denied.

Harris contended that the separation of the powers of the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the government is mandatory, and that one cannot be permitted to overlap the other.

"The Supreme Court of the United States has steadfastly refused to encroach upon either the executive or legislative branches of government," the answer stated.

"The reasoning which prevents judicial encroachment upon the executive applies with equal force to any requested encroachments upon the legislative branch of the Government.

Cites Court's Limitations.

"No court can constitutionally exercise the legislative function. Neither will the courts interfere with or restrain, control or direct the progress of legislation.

"The Senate of the United States has the unquestioned power to appoint committees to conduct fact-finding investigations. They are a necessary incident to the legislative function. A select committee of the United States Senate is a part of the Senate."

Harris contended that the freedom of expression guaranteed a member of Congress on the floor extends to acts done by members in connection with the business of Congress. He also contended that the Hearst action constituted a suit against the United States, which may not be sued without its consent.

"A special committee of the Senate is a part of the Senate. It is neither a natural person nor a legal entity. It can neither sue nor be sued without express authority of the United States Senate," the answer said.

The District Court recently granted similar suit brought by Silas Strawn, Chicago attorney. In that case the Western Union Telegraph Co. and not the Senate committee was the defendant.

Princess Marie Sails For East Africa Tour

Naples, March 26 (AP).—Dressed in a Red Cross uniform and carrying her own luggage, Crown Princess Marie Jose sailed today for East Africa. Her immediate destination is Massaua, where she will start a month's tour of inspection of field hospitals.

In the midst of a large group of civil and military officials who cheered the princess' departure were Queen Elena and Crown Prince Umberto, the princess' husband. The ship is to be escorted by two submarines as far as Port Said. The princess, who has taken special courses in treatment of tropical diseases, also took with her a sewing machine for making pads and bandages.

Rankin to Seek Weather Data In Gale Tragedy

Assistant Relief Head Also to Be Called in Veterans' Death Inquiry.

Determined "to get at the bottom of this thing," Chairman John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, announced yesterday that he would call Assistant Relief Administrator Aubrey Williams and Weather Bureau officials today to give his World War Veterans' Committee their version of the hurricane tragedy last September on the Florida Keys, in which 168 veterans perished.

Blame for the storm deaths has been fixed on the Federal Government by veterans' organizations, because of delay in ordering the abandonment of CCC camps in which the veterans were concentrated, and because of a lack of accurate storm warnings. Federal officials have countered that the storm was "an act of God," and that all reasonable precautions were taken.

Representative Joe H. Eagle (Democrat), Texas, a member of the committee, yesterday renewed his charges that the "Government should have known those sand spits were not safe places." He said the victims were in the camps by Government invitation when the tornado came, and declared:

"It would be monstrous if this Government did not do something for these men's dependents."

Representative J. Hardin Peterson (Democrat), Florida, was the only witness yesterday. He expressed no opinion as to responsibility for the deaths, but explained why he had proposed a Congressional investigation. He said the judgment of the veterans' organizations and other groups which investigated the tragedy previously was that only Congress could make an impartial inquiry.

Peterson briefly outlined the facts in the case. He quoted Veterans' Bureau reports showing that 123 had been identified positively as dead, 45 identified tentatively, and that 91 were missing. Several of the dead, he said, had been members of the bonus army, driven out of Washington in 1932.

Three objectives for the committee were outlined by Peterson. He asked:

1. That compensation be given to the survivors and dependents of those killed.

2. That the responsibility for the tragedy be fixed.

3. That a shorter method of proving death be fixed, so that compensation for the dependents may be immediate.

Chairman Rankin revealed that later he would call Ray W. Helden, of Palm Beach, Fla., to testify. Helden was in charge of the three camps when the storm struck. Another who will be called is Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines, Rankin said.

Both Gen. Hines and Aubrey Williams were present while Representative Peterson gave his testimony.

The inquiry into the tragedy hinges on a bill introduced last January 3 by Chairman Rankin. It would provide pensions for the widows, children and dependent parents of the veterans who died as a result of the hurricane.

Australia to Spend $35,000,000 on Arms

Canberra, Australia, March 26 (AP). A $35,000,000 armaments program to reinforce Australia's air, sea and land defenses was made known today.

Sources close to the federal government said £7,000,000 would be spent by the end of this year on the plan, which includes the purchase of 33 planes, a secret program of naval building and construction of additional gun emplacements at the head of Sidney Harbor, on Rottnes Island, West Australia and on Moreton Island, Queensland.

Mrs. Standley Suffers Eye Injury in Fall

London, March 26 (AP).—Mrs. William H. Standley, wife of Admiral Standley, American delegate to the Naval Conference, started homeward tonight with a black eye and an injured cheekbone.

A few hours before the boat train for Southampton pulled out, Mrs. Standley fell down the steps of the Admiralty as she and her husband made a farewell call to British officials.

Traffic Ticket Fixing Efforts Again Assailed

Board of Trade Group Told of Practice; Woman Driver Exonerated.

Attempts to "fix" traffic tickets by so-called pressure and influence were scored yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Board of Trade traffic committee in the Harrington Hotel.

Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman of the committee, who recently testified to alleged "fixing" activities before the House Traffic sub-committee, told the meeting that members of the House committee "were astounded to learn what was going on."

"When I testified before Representative Carpenter's committee," he said, "I appeared to be the only one who knew that pressure is brought to bear to 'fix' traffic tickets. This committee knows—and so does everyone else—that such practices are common."

Roberts Joins Denunciation.

He was joined in his denunciation of ticket-quashing methods by People's Counsel William A. Roberts.

"There is no need for anyone to 'fix' a ticket," said Roberts. "I was in the corporation counsel's office for several years, and I never once 'fixed' a ticket for my family or a Congressman or anyone else."

He explained that attempts at ticket quashing are made by influential persons who walk into the office of a police official hand him a traffic summons and say:

"Here, fix this up. I'm not going to pay anything."

During the discussion, Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the police traffic division, was lauded for his administration of traffic affairs and described as "one of the best traffic authorities in the country."

Traffic School Urged.

Resolutions providing for establishment of a traffic school for motorists and drivers convicted of minor offenses were adopted by the committee. Covering five points, the resolutions provided:

1. That a traffic school be established immediately.
2. That the school be operated by the director of vehicles and traffic with the assistance of police.
3. That classes be held each Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7 to 9 p. m.
4. That attendance be entirely voluntary and that after a certain period of time traffic court judges be urged to sentence offenders to school.
5. That $1,000 per year for operating expenses be provided by donation from various civic and motoring organizations, and that the Board of Trade contribute $200.

Cadet Major Injured.

Gin Hon Lee was a sadly disappointed young man yesterday.

It was the day of the annual competitive drill for the high schools. Lee, who is 15 years old and a major of McKinley High's cadets, started on his way to school with his uniform neatly pressed, his brass shining. But gloom was lurking in the shadows.

Lee walked into the side of an automobile. Despite his pleas he was taken to Sibley Hospital and admitted for treatment for cuts, bruises and shock.

Lee, who lives at 5522 Connecticut avenue northwest, was slated to graduate in the February class, but he stayed over so he could participate in yesterday's drill. Richard Farr, 4125 Fourth street northwest, adjutant of the school battalion, led the cadets.

Meanwhile, a man found at North Capitol and G streets yesterday is still in an unconscious condition in Casualty Hospital. The victim, who has a fractured skull and who was unidentified for 24 hours, regained consciousness for a few minutes yesterday and said he was Charles Wilson, 52, of 133 Third street northwest, and again lapsed into unconsciousness. There is no such address.

Absolved In Death.

A coroner's jury yesterday absolved from blame Miss Louise C. Buckingham, 1525 Twenty-ninth street northwest, after an inquest into the traffic death of Emanual Evans, 31, of 425 K street northwest.

Evans, a colored laborer, was killed Tuesday when struck by Miss Buckingham's car at Georgia and Florida avenues northwest. He was the twenty-first traffic victim in the District this year.

Miss Buckingham told the jury the colored man stepped from the curb directly into the path of her car. Other witnesses told the same story.

Nine Permits Suspended.

The Revocations Board yesterday suspended the permits of nine more motorists who have been convicted of speeding.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Bruce D. Sanders, 634 Thirty-first street southeast, 42 miles; Morris Slavsky, 801 Tenth street northeast, 38 miles, second offense; Allen C. Speidth, 1104 Forty-second street northeast.

Bill Authorizes Start On Jefferson Memorial

He introduced a bill authorizing the commission to formulate plans and to enter into contracts for construction of a memorial at a cost not to exceed $3,000,000.

The bill further authorizes the commission to call for technical aid from governmental agencies and to employ personnel without regard to civil service status.

Officers Elected By Alumni Group

Growing tendency toward regimentation of education and "mass production of graduates from colleges and universities" was decried by Washington Alumni of St. John's College of Annapolis, Md., at a meeting in the Blackstone Hotel Wednesday night.

St. John's College is the third oldest institution of learning in America and always has been a private college.

Present tendencies in education, if continued, would engulf such institutions "with great loss to character building so essential to the stability of thought in the Nation," the alumni declared.

Francis W. Hill, jr., formerly assistant corporation counsel, was elected president; Arthur C. Elgin, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., vice president, and William Norwood Briscoe, secretary and treasurer.

Dr. Colin Mackall, professor of chemistry of George Wasington University, was the principal speaker. A reception will be held soon in honor of Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., an alumnus of St. John's, who recently was appointed surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service.

New Negro Bar Group Here Selects Officers

Organization was effected last night at the Musolit Club, of the Harlan-Terrell Lawyers Association, composed of a group of Negro lawyers who separated from the Washington Bar Association last week because of indorsement given by that body to the Negro Congress, which met recently in Chicago.

Separation was made because of alleged communistic affiliation of the congress, of which John P. Davis is secretary. In its constitution adopted last night, the new organization proclaimed its intention to support vigorously the Constitution of the United States. Nathan Dobbins was elected president and C. K. Brown, secretary.

Girl Is Beaten At Richmond; Four Are Held

Young Woman Tells Police She Was Burned With Lighted Matches.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, March 25.—Accused by a 23-year-old girl of beating her and burning her with lighted matches while they held her captive on the outskirts of South Richmond, four men were remanded to jail today to await action by a hustings court grand jury in April.

The men, James Brooks, 23; Oliver Darden, 25; Stephen Bohannon, 25, and Samuel Overby, 26, pleaded innocent on charges of criminal attack, but they were bound over after a police court hearing at which the girl and Police Lieut. Dan Duling testified.

The defendants admitted they were with the young woman Saturday night, when she alleged the attack occurred. Duling said an acquaintance of Brooks and an unidentified Negro were beaten by the men the same night. The men were arrested Sunday on complaint of the young woman.

Early Sunday the bruised, blood-stained girl staggered into a South Richmond police station with her story. The four were arrested later that day.

Police Lieut. Dan Duling said Bohannan has admitted a part of the girl's charges while the other three told Duling they were present.

Piecing together the story told by the girl, Duling uncovered what he said was a story of brutality.

At least two other persons were victims of the quartet that night. One, Llewellyn Parsons, an acquaintance of Brooks, told Duling he had wandered into the vine-covered nook while the four men and the girl were there. He was attacked, beaten into unconsciousness and robbed, he said.

An unidentified Negro, the girl told Duling, was beaten and bound with ropes while she was a prisoner. He escaped, and police have been unable to find him since.

The four youths were held for the grand jury after pleading innocent at a police court hearing.

Mrs. Meeks

this reason I didn't claim any immunity," Meeks later told reporters.

Representative and Mrs. Meeks arrived at the courthouse early. They immediately went to the office of Kindelberger, where they remained behind closed doors for more than an hour. One reporter who sought entrance to the conference was non-too-gently evicted.

Once in Judge McMahon's court, the elderly couple sat together on the first row of benches. Mrs. Meeks appeared nervous when summoned before the bar and repeatedly turned to her husband for reassurance.

"There wasn't another car in Rock Creek Park and I had no idea how fast I was going," she told the court. "Why, I was just admiring a beautiful rock formation when the officer stopped us."

Her husband was sitting on the rear seat and didn't make his identity known until after Policeman Beckman asked her for her permit, Mrs. Meeks said.

"My husband told the officer who he was and where we were going—but he insisted on seeing some permit. At first he wouldn't look at the Congressional tag on the front of the car."

Both Meeks and his wife denied continuing at a high rate of speed and passing a stop sign after the policeman dismissed them. This statement, however, is contained in the official police report, it was learned.

And everything was all over, the couple shook hands with Beckman and retired to an anteroom, there to await arrangements to whisk them through a rear doorway, past photographers and reporters, to Capitol Hill.

Jurors Queried On Red Opinions

Tampa, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Prospective jurors in the initial trial resulting from the flogging death of Joseph Shoemaker, labor organizer, were asked today whether they believed in "American ideals and institutions" or "the principles of communism."

Standing beside an American flag they unanimously affirmed their adherence to the former.

The name of Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for President, was brought into the questioning when the veniremen were asked if they had heard his recent speech in Tampa condemning the flogging.

Thomas was referred to as "the nationally known Communist and propagandist" by Pat Whitaker, fiery chief of counsel for C. A. Brown, John Bridges and C. W. Carlisle, suspended policeman on trial for the kidnaping of E. F. Poulnot when Shoemaker was abducted and fatally beaten.

Pope Changes Mass Plan.

Vatican City, March 26 (AP).—Pope Pius, prelates said tonight, will not celebrate the Easter mass at St. Peter's because of his health. He renewed that custom after conciliation between the Vatican and Italy, but has decided that exertion of more than an hour is inadvisable this year.

Toy's Setting Found in Heart Of Newborn Child After Death

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 26. Discovery of a toy jewel setting in the heart of a newborn child was reported today by the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The find gave the medical world one of its most baffling mysteries.

The small piece of metal was found, the correspondent said, in the heart of an English baby girl, who "appeared normal in every way but died suddenly some hours after birth for no apparent reason."

A postmortem examination showed nothing until the heart was dissected.

"When the right ventricle was opened," the Journal writer declared, "a small, bright object was seen lying free within the cavity and was extracted under three pairs of curious eyes."

Although "fully aware of the incredible nature of the case," the correspondent said the examining physicians were "impelled to place on record * * * by a letter to the Lancet (famed English medical journal) * * * what they believe to be a unique occurrence in the annals of pathology."

He quoted the doctors as describing their find thus:

"It was a small piece of metal resembling brass or gilded tin, appearing to be a circlet of sorts, folded upon itself, with regular serrations along the edge and measuring roughly 3 x 2 mm. It looked something like the claw setting of a toy jewel ring, such as is found in Christmas crackers."

The correspondent concluded:

"No satisfactory explanation seems to be possible. * * * The physicians emphasize the fact that there was no possibility of the object having been dropped by one of them * * * or of its having been shed by one of the instruments used. * * *"

Professor Resigns.

Stretz Woman Will Face Jury Today at Trial

Hope of Escaping Chair in Gebhardt Killing Rests on Her Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Her self-defense plea disputed by a battery of police officers, Vera Stretz tonight prepared to take the witness stand and tell a general sessions jury tomorrow why she ended her ill-starred romance with four well-placed bullets.

On her own story of what happened before she killed Dr. Fritz Gebhardt in his skyscraper apartment last November rests her chief hope, defense counsel said, of escaping the electric chair.

An added sensation was promised when Defense Counsel Samuel Leibowitz indicated he would introduce several of the letters exchanged by the 31-year-old ash blonde stenographer and her married former employer, head of a German import-export firm.

Judge Cornelius Collins directed Assistant District Attorney Miles O'Brien to turn the letters over to Leibowitz and adjourned court for the afternoon so the defense lawyer could study them and have them translated from German to English.

Miss Stretz, who sobbed convulsively and moaned, "I want to go home," at sight of the blood-stained gown taken from Gebhardt's body, will be on the stand about two days, her attorney said.

The State closed its case against her with a burst of police testimony against her lawyer's contention that she shot to protect herself from a "brutal and unnatural" assault.

"There was no assault," detectives quoted her as saying when she was arrested shortly after the killing.

Leibowitz tore into the detectives on cross-examination and declared they were not telling the truth when they said there was no stenographic record of the statements she made after arrest.

"It is my contention!" he roared, "that they have added on this no-assault business to forestall any defense of self-defense."

Bill Rewritten, Tax Hearings Start Monday

were embraced in the 1-page report turned over to the full committee by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat) Washington, chairman of the sub-committee.

Outstanding among these were:

A recommendation to place railroads under the new tax on undistributed corporate earnings, but with the right to file a consolidated return for their first taxable year.

A proposal to tax dividends paid out of earnings and profits accumulated prior to 1936.

A suggestion that the full committee determine whether dividends paid by banks to shareholders should be taxed both for normal and surtax income, as are dividends of other corporations. All insurance company dividends would be taxed.

Corporate Tax Analyzed.

The new $591,000,000 corporation tax, principal pillar of the new revenue program, was explained, with two detailed schedules. Corporations earning under $10,000 a year would be taxed on a scale ranging from 1 pe rcent on total net income, if 10 per cent of earnings were undistributed, up to 29.7 per cent if 70.3 per cent were withdrawn from shareholders. Companies having net income of more than $10,000 would be taxed at 4 per cent if 10 per cent of income was retained, up to 42½ per cent if 57½ per cent were withheld from distribution.

In between the two schedules an "intermediate" formula would operate for companies earning more than $10,000 to be used at their option. This would work to the advantage, particularly, of companies earning between $10,000 and $20,000, and many in excess of this bracket.

The tax under this formula would be computed by adding:

1. A tax upon the statutory net income computed under the first schedule and

2. A tax upon the amount of the statutory net income in excess of $10,000, at the rate listed in the second schedule, which would be applied if the tax were being computed solely under that schedule.

"Windfall" Tax Plans.

Formulas were disclosed for the first time for imposing a 90 per cent "windfall" tax on corporations benefiting from unpaid or refunded processing taxes, referred to in the sub-committee statement as "unjust enrichment."

This proposal, which is expected to run up against a constitutional challenge in the courts, would tax first "those who were supposedly liable for the tax and shifted its burden to others, but who did not pay the tax or who paid it and obtained a refund."

In such cases, the net income from the sale of articles on which processing taxes were imposed would be computed. The extent to which the taxpayer shifted the tax to others would be determined. The tax would be imposed on the portion of net income representing the amount of the tax burden shifted.

The second phase of the "windfall" tax would reach "dealers who included the amount of a Federal excise tax in the price of goods sold by them, but who were subsequently reimbursed by their vendors for the amount of the tax."

To Compute Net Income.

In such a case, the net income arising from reimbursement of this kind would be computed. The extent to which the dealer had passed the tax on to his customers would be determined. The tax would apply to the part of the net reimbursement representing the amount of the burden passed on to customers.

The sub-committee report recommended relief for corporations which, while having an adjusted net income for the taxable year, lack sufficient acculated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year from which to distribute taxable dividends equal to the adjusted net income.

If the accumulated earnings and profits of the corporation as of the close of the taxable year are less than the adjusted net income, the tax would be computed by adding:

(1) A tax of 22½ per cent of the excess of net income over the accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year, and

(2) a tax on the remainder of the net income in accordance with the corporation tax schedule applicable to net income equal to the amount of such remainder.

Other Recommendations.

Other recommendations in the report call for a normal as well as a surtax on dividends received by individuals, a 22½ per cent tax on dividends to foreign holders of stock in American corporations, a 22½ per cent tax on foreign corporations, a $35,000,000 tax refund on floor stocks on hand when the AAA was invalidated, exemption of banks and insurance companies from the new corporate tax and substitution of a flat 15 per cent levy; a 15 per cent earnings tax on corporations in receivership, a 22½ per cent tax on corporations under contractual obligation not to pay out dividends; reduction of the capital stock tax from $140 to 70 cents per $1,000 and repeal of the law after June 30, and repeal of the excess profits tax after expiration of the present taxable year.

Treadway in his statement yesterday "congratulated" Democratic members of the sub-committee "on finally showing some slight independence in refusing to include in the report a recommendation for the continuance of the processing tax."

Text of House Ways and Means Sub-Committee's Report on New Tax Bill

Following is the text of the sub-committee report on the new tax bill as approved by the House Ways and Means Committee for the purpose of holding hearings:

This report embodies the recommendations of the sub-committee of the Ways and Means Committee to the full committee with respect to the taxation of undistributed income of corporations, elimination of the present corporation tax, termination of the capital stock tax and excess profits tax, imposition of taxes on unjust enrichment occurring as a result of the nonpayment of excise taxes, and related matters.

The recommendations submitted herewith contemplate only such changes in the revenue act of 1934, as amended, as are necessary to carry out the policies herein set forth. In some cases, however, in order that there may be a clear understanding of the scope of the sub-committee's proposals, a specific statement has been made that no change in the present law is proposed with respect to the particular matter.

I

Taxable Years.

The changes proposed in the present income tax (Titles I and IA of the revenue act of 1934, as amended) will be applicable to taxable years (whether calendar or fiscal) beginning after December 31, 1935. That is, taxpayers on a calendar year basis will first report their income under, and be subject to tax as provided in the new proposals for, the calendar year 1936 and their returns for such year will be due on or before March 15, 1937. Taxpayers on a fiscal year basis whose fiscal years begin in 1936 will similarly report and pay tax for taxable years beginning in 1936 and ending in 1937, and the returns will be due on or before 2½ months after the end of such taxable years.

II

Undistributed Income.

It is recommended that there be substituted for the present graduated corporation tax a tax on the income of corporations graduated according to the percentage of their income which is undistributed, and that for the purposes of this tax corporations be divided into two classes on the basis of the amount of their net income. The recommendations specifically are as follows:

For the purpose of the schedules hereinafter recommended the term, "adjusted net income," means the net income (see recommendation No. XV relating to intercorporate dividends, less the credit allowed by section 26 of the revenue act of 1934 (relating to interest on Liberty Bonds and interest on obligations of Government corporations).

The term "undisputed net income" means the adjusted net income minus the sum of:

(1) Taxable dividends paid during the period beginning on the expiration of 2½ months after the beginning of the taxable year and ending on the expiration of 2½ months after the close of the taxable year (see recommendations Nos. XI, XIII, XIV and XVIII); and

(2) The tax computed under the schedules contained in this recommendation.

SCHEDULE I.

Corporations With Adjusted Net Income of $10,000 or Less.

If there is no undistributed net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income.

If the undisputed net income is 10 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 1 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 20 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 3½ per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 30 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 7½ per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 40 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 13 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 50 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 18½ per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 60 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 24 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 70 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 29½ per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 70.3 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 29.7 per cent.

SCHEDULE II.

Corporations With Adjusted Net Incomes of More Than $10,000.

If there is no undistributed net income, there shall be no tax on the adjusted net income.

If the undistributed net income is 10 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 4 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 20 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 9 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 30 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 15 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 40 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 25 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 50 per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 35 per cent.

If the undistributed net income is 57½ per cent of the adjusted net income, the rate of tax on the adjusted net income shall be 42½ per cent.

If the percentage which the undistributed net income is of the adjusted net income is not one of the percentages of the adjusted net income shown in Schedule I or II, then the rate of tax shall be proportionate.

If the adjusted net income is more than $10,000 the tax, at the option of the corporation, shall, in lieu of being computed under Schedule II, be computed by adding:

(1) A tax upon the adjusted net income computed under Schedule I, and

(2) A tax upon the amount of the adjusted net income in excess of $10,000, at the rate in Schedule II which would be applied if the tax were being computed solely under such schedule.

III.

Exemption of Banks.

It is recommended that incorporated banks and trust companies, bona fide operated as such, be exempted from the plan proposed under recommendation No. II, and be subject to a tax of 15 per cent on the net income (see recommendation No. XV relating to intercorporate dividends) in lieu of the present graduated corporation tax. It is further recommended that banks continue to be subject to section 102 of the revenue act of 1934 relating to accumulation of surplus to avoid surtax.

The sub-committee leaves to the full committee as an unsettled question whether dividends paid by banks to shareholders, individual or corporate, should be treated under the present law or whether they should be fully taxable like dividends paid by other corporations.

IV.

Insurance Companies.

It is recommended that all bona-fide insurance companies (mutual and stock, foreign and domestic) be exempted from the plan proposed under recommendation No. II and be subject to a tax of 15 per cent in lieu of the graduated rates under existing law; except that foreign insurance companies other than life and other than mutual be subject to a rate of 22½ per cent in lieu of the graduated rates under existing law.

It is recommended that dividends received by all insurance companies be treated the same as dividends received by other corporations (see recommendation No. XV).

V.

Receivership.

It is recommended that corporations in receivership be exempt from the plan proposed under recommendation No. II and be subject to a tax of 15 per cent in lieu of the graduated rates under existing law.

Dividends received by such corporations shall be included in net income, and dividends paid by them shall be subject to tax in the hands of the shareholder as in the case of dividends paid by other corporations.

VI.

Foreign Corporations.

It is recommended that foreign corporations be exempt from the plan proposed under recommendation No. II and be subject to a tax of 22½ per cent instead of the rate under existing law, accompanied by a change in the rate on withholding under existing law to 22½ per cent.

VII.

Railroads.

It is recommended that railroads be subject to the plan proposed under recommendation No. II and the privilege of filing consolidated returns be continued as to them; the rate of tax to be the same as in the case of other corporations under recommendation No. II; but with the right to make a new election whether or not to file a consolidated return for their first taxable year under the new law.

If in the affiliated group the parent corporation is in receivership, the entire group shall be taxed as other corporations in receivership (see recommendation No. V). If any other member of the group is in receivership it does not gain the exemption referred to in recommendation No. V.

VIII.

Corporations.

It is recommended that corporations now exempt from income tax under section 101 of the revenue act of 1934 (labor, agricultural, charitable and other nonprofit corporations), be exempt from the new plan and from the corporation tax under existing law.

IX.

Capital Stock Tax.

The rate of capital stock tax imposed by section 105 of the revenue act of 1935 is proposed to be reduced to 70 cents per $1,000 of the adjusted declared value for the capital stock year ending June 30, 1936. This constitutes a substitution of a 70-cent rate for a $1.40 rate. The tax is proposed to be terminated for all later years.

X.

Excess Profits Tax.

The excess profits tax imposed by section 106 of the revenue act of 1935 is proposed to be terminated at the end of the first income tax taxable year of the taxpayer which ends after June 30, 1936. The rate is not changed. Corporations whose income tax taxable years are on a calendar-year basis will be subject to this tax for the calendar year 1936. Corporations whose income tax taxable years are on a fiscal year basis, which years end after June 30, 1936, will be subject to that tax for the first income tax taxable year ending after such date. The tax will not apply to any income tax taxable year which ends after June 30, 1937.

XI.

Dividend Carryover.

It is recommended that if the taxable dividends paid during the period beginning on the expiration of 2½ months after the beginning of the taxable year and ending on the expiration of 2½ months after the close of the taxable year are in excess of the adjusted net income for the taxable year, the excess (or if there is no adjusted net income, the entire amount of the taxable dividends) shall be allowable as a deduction in computing the undistributed net income for the succeeding taxable year, and, to the extent not needed to reduce the tax in such year (after first applying as a deduction any more recent dividend payments), then in the second succeeding taxable year.

XII.

Dividends in Kind.

In computing undistributed net income, if a corporation declares a dividend in kind, the deduction will be computed at markets or at the adjusted basis in the hands of the corporation, whichever is lower.

XIII.

Dividends.

It is recommended that dividends paid out of earnings and profits accrued before March 1, 1913, or out of increase in value accrued before March 1, 1913, be fully taxable when distributed.

XIV

Tax on Dividends.

It is recommended that the present credit, allowed for normal tax purposes, of dividends received shall be abolished, so that all dividends will be subject to normal tax as well as to surtax.

XV

Dividends.

It is recommended that the present deduction allowed corporations be abolished, so that intercorporate dividends will remain in net income.

XVI

Pre-1936 Earnings.

It is recommended that dividends out of earnings and profits accumulated prior to the beginning of the first taxable year of the corporation under the new plan shall when declared out as dividends be fully taxable as in the case of the distribution of subsequent earnings and profits.

XVII

It is recommended that no exemption from tax on the shareholder be given to dividends declared out of earnings and profits of a year in which the corporation has been subject to taxation under the new plan recommended under recommendation No. II.

XVIII

Liquidating Dividends.

In computing undistributed net income, it is recommended that the corporation be allowed a deduction for any part of liquidating dividends properly allocable to earnings and profits, but no deduction shall be given for the portion thereof properly chargeable to capital account.

XIX

Income in Excess of Earnings.

It is recommended that relief be provided for the corporation which having an adjusted net income for the taxable year, lacks sufficient accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year from which to distribute taxable dividends equal to the adjusted net income. For example:

(1) A corporation may have an adjusted net income of $100,000, but a deficit, carried over from prior years, of $150,000. Any distribution by the corporation could not be out of accumulated earnings and profits, would not be taxable as a dividend to the shareholders, and hence, under the rule previously recommended (see definition of "undistributed net income" in recommendation No. 2), would not be deductible by the corporation from adjusted net income in computing undistributed net income. Therefore, even if an amount equal to the adjusted net income were distributed, the tax on the corporation would be the same as if no distribution were made.

(2) A similar hardship would exist where the net adjusted income is $100,000, with a prior deficit of $60,000. Here the maximum taxable dividend would be $40,000, and $60,000 would, even if distributed, be taxable to the corporation as if not distributed.

(3) Even if no deficit exists, hardship may exist where the earned surplus at the beginning of the taxable year is not enough to meet a non-deductible loss occurring during the year. Thus suppose the accumulated earnings and profits at the beginning of the year are $1,000, the adjusted net income $100,000, but a capital net loss of $40,000 has been sustained. The earnings and profits for the year are only $60,000, making the total accumulated earnings and profits $61,000. Therefore, without relief, the corporation must pay tax on $39,000 even if it distributes $100,000, an amount equal to the entire adjusted net income.

The relief recommended is as follows:

If the accumulated earnings and profits of the corporation as of the close of the taxable year (computed without diminution by reason of the distribution during the taxable year of earnings and profits) are less than the adjusted net income, the tax shall, in lieu of being computed under the schedules usually applicable, be computed by adding:

(a) A tax of 22½ per centum of the excess of the adjusted net income over the accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year; and

(b) a tax upon the remainder of the adjusted net income in accordance with the schedule (see recommendation No. 2) applicable to an adjusted net income equal to the amount of such remainder.

It should be provided that this provision shall in no case operate to increase the tax that would be payable without its application.

The effect of the recommended plan upon the examples above given is as follows:

Example No. 1—The tax would be 22½ per centum of the entire adjusted net income.

Example No. 2—The tax would be 22½ per centum of $60,000 plus the tax on $40,000 in accordance with the applicable schedule.

Example No 3.—The tax would be 22½ per centum of $39,000 plus the tax on $61,000 according to the applicable schedule.

XX

Contracts.

It is recommended that a corporation which has, prior to January 1, 1936, made a bona fide contract not to pay dividends, or not to pay out as dividends a stipulated portion of its earnings and profits for the taxable year, shall be taxed 22½ per cent on the part of the adjusted net income which equals the earnings and profits which it is prohibited by the contract from using for the payment of dividends, and on the remainder of the adjusted net income, if any, shall be taxed at the rates applicable under the appropriate schedule applicable to an adjusted net income equal to such remainder. It should be provided this provision shall in no case operate to increase the tax that would be payable without its application.

XXI

Corporations Improperly Accumulating Surplus.

Section 102 of the revenue act of 1934 is proposed to be made inapplicable except to banks, insurance companies exempt from the new graduated rate on undistributed net income, and foreign corporations.

XXII

Holding Companies.

Section 351 of the revenue act of 1934, as amended, is proposed to be made inapplicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935.

XXIII.

Non-Resident Aliens.

It is recommended that no change be made in the normal tax and surtax of non-resident alien individuals, but that the rate of withholding at the source under existing law be increased to 22½ per cent; any overpayment of tax resulting therefrom to be refunded.

It is recommended that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue be given authority by regulations to exempt from withholding salaries and wages of non-resident alien individuals who go back and forth at frequent intervals.

XXIV.

Windfall Tax.

It is recommended that a tax at the rate of 90 per cent be imposed on unjust enrichment accruing to any person from shifting to others the burden of Federal excise taxes. This tax would apply to two classes of persons:

(1) Those who were supposedly liable for the tax and shifted its burden to others, but who did not pay the tax or who paid it and obtained a refund; and

(2) Dealers who included the amount of a Federal excise tax in the price of goods sold by them, but who were subsequently reimbursed by their vendors for the amount of the tax.

This tax would be a special income tax. In the first class, the tax would be computed as follows: The net income from the sale of the articles with respect to which the tax was supposedly imposed, but not paid (or was paid and refunded) would be computed. The extent to which the taxpayer shifted the burden of the tax to others would be determined. The tax would be based on the portion of this net income which represents the amount of tax burden shifted.

In the second class, the tax would be computed as follows: The net income of the taxpayer arising from reimbursement to him by his vendors for excise tax burdens borne by him in the purchase of the articles would be computed. The extent to which he had passed the tax on to his customers would then be determined. The tax would apply to the part of the net reimbursement which represents the amount of tax burden passed on to the customers.

The term "Federal excise tax" should be defined for such purposes to include all Federal internal revenue taxes with respect to articles and commodities, whether valid or invalid.

The proposed tax should apply retroactively to all income tax taxable years ending during the calendar year 1935 and to all subsequent taxable years. It will thus cover the cases of unjust enrichment arising as a result of the recent impounding and non-payment of processing taxes.

The net income in the categories specified above must be determined by the allocation of the proper deductions from the gross income arising in those categories, under rules and regulations in accordance with a general standard laid down by the bill.

It is suggested that a prima-facie rule be established for determining the extent to which the taxpayer shifted the excise tax burden to others. This can be accomplished by the comparison of the gross profit margin of the taxpayer with respect to the articles in question against the average gross profit margin of the taxpayer with respect to such articles during a representative period of two years preceding the initial imposition of the Federal excise tax. The gross profit margin would be the difference between the selling prive of the articles and the cost of the raw materials entering into those articles, exclusive of indirect and overhead costs. The taxpayer would be presumed to have shifted the burden of the tax to the extent that his gross profit margin with respect to the articles in question exceeded his gross profit margin during the representative period preceding the tax. The selling price should be adjusted by the deduction of any amounts subsequently repaid to the purchaser, on or before March 3, 1936, or pursuant to a bona-fide written contract entered into on or before March 3, 1936, as reimbursement for the amount included in the price on account of the excise tax. Allowance might also be made for lawyers' fees and expenses of litigation incurred in obtaining refund or preventing collection of the tax, or (in the case of the middleman) in obtaining reimbursement from the vender for the tax burden. It is suggested, however, that the allowance of these fees and expenses be limited to 15 per cent of the amount involved in the litigation.

Provision must also be made for the establishment of true costs and selling prices where the taxpayer has dealt through an affiliated corporation.

The above rules for determining the extent to which the tax burden was shifted should, of course, merely establish a presumption. Either the taxpayer or the commissioner should be allowed to show that other factors than the tax accounted for the change or lack of change in the taxpayer's gross profit margin. The bill should also provide for the consideration of proof that the taxpayer modified his contracts of sale to reflect the initiation, termination, or change in amount of the excise tax, or at such times changed his sale price, by substantially the amount of tax or the change therein, or at any time billed the tax as a separate item to any vendee, or at any time indicated by any writing that his sale price included the amount of the tax, but should provide that the taxpayer may establish that such acts are not properly to be considered in connection with the particular sales in question.

Provision should be made against double taxation of the income subject to the proposed tax by the exclusion of the amount of income upon which the proposed tax is based from the computation of any other income tax on the taxpayer. Special provision will have to be made for returns in the case of taxable years which ended prior to the enactment of the bill.

XXV.

Floor Stocks Tax.

The sub-committee recommends that appropriate provisions be enacted which will place all holders of floor stocks except the first domestic processor of articles processed from commodities subject to the processing tax on January 6, 1936, in substantially the same position they would have occupied had the processing taxes been terminated by proclamation by the Secretary of Agriculture in the manner provided by the agricultural adjustment act.

The agricultural adjustment act provided for a floor stocks tax on the effective date of the processing tax so that all articles, the product of the commodity subject to the processing tax, would move into channels of trade equally taxed. That act likewise provided for a refund upon termination of the tax to holders of floor stocks with certain limitations so that, in the main, articles on hand on that date and articles subsequently processed would also move into channels of trade, this time equally untaxed. Certain inequities have resulted from termination of that tax which require special treatment. The committee feels that this result can be accomplished by appropriate legislation providing for refunds to holders of floor stocks on January 6, 1936, without proof of payment of the processing tax by the processor to the Government. If the tax was not actually paid, any resultant advantage to the processor will be taken care of by the windfall income tax which is being recommended. The sub-committee feels, however, that this refund should be limited in amount to the amount by which the price of the finished article was reduced after the effective time of this floor stocks refund provision. Since the suggested remedial provision is not one required by law, but is for the purpose of fair dealing, it is believed that the commissioner's determination should be final and not subject to administrative or judicial review. In addition, because of the cost of handling such claims, both to claimants and to the Government, we believe that a minimum limitation of $10 should be placed upon such claims. A similar provision was contained in the floor stocks provision of the agricultural adjustment act.

12 New Entries In Scholarship Final Received

Additional Seniors' Papers in Maryland, Virginia Schools Arrive.

The race for college scholarships at universities in Washington widened yesterday with receipt at The Post of 12 additional essay entries, which have won first honors in Maryland and Virginia high schools. These will entitle their writers, all honor seniors, to admission into campus finals of the third Washington Post scholarship competition this spring.

The 12 champions, victorious over approximately 500 classmates in intramurals which started with research work last fall, are seniors in seven Maryland and five Virginia high schools. The Marylanders are Mary Loretta Bradburn, of Sacred Heart at La Plata; Mary Bryan, Hyattsville; Edith Ritchie, of Beall High at Frostburg; George Thomas Weschler, Great Mills; David Danner, Marlboro; Francis J. Moran, St. Peter's at Westernport, and Mary Mae Jacobs, Gaithersburg.

The Virginia entries are Ernestine Baugher, Monroe High at Standardsville; Elizabeth Broome, Louisa High; Ellene Barger, Natural Bridge; Wendell Flory, Fairfax, and Charlotte Olinger, New Market.

Miss Bradburn's choice at La Plata concludes a five-month program of debates, research work and essay writing which, according to Sister M. Kostka, superior at Sacred Heart High School, was arranged as part of The Post competition and which, "because of its scope, opened new avenues of thought and intensified interest in important social, economic and political problems facing students today."

Describes Interest.

"The satisfaction which we teachers derive from the interest and earnestness displayed by our pupils," said Sister Kostka in submitting her winner's essay, "surpasses any prize which could be awarded."

Miss Bradburn's essay covers "The NRA-Supreme Court Issue." Sister M. St. Margaret, in charge of the project, announced second honors to Joseph Bradburn and third to Mary L. McDonagh, both seniors. Miss Bradburn, who this year captured the Maryland State prize in the Irish essay contest and the Bishop McNamara medal for an essay on southern Maryland, is active in her school's literary and Curie Science clubs, the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade and the athletic association. She is the daugher of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Bradburn, of La Plata, and is ambitious to become a writer.

Miss Bryan, whose paper is on "Uncle Sam's TVA Experiment," is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Bryan, of Berwyn, Md. She rates especially high in her chemistry, mathematics and civics studies and is ambitious to specialize in chemistry at college. She is active in her school's athletics. Vera R. Parker, civics teacher, supervised the Hyattsville project.

Miss Ritchie wrote on "The Italo-Ethiopian Dispute." Mrs. Gertrude A. C. Williams, who supervised, announced second honors to Ralph Crump and third to Mary Catherine Kenney. If successful in the American University campus finals, Miss Ritchie will train to become a teacher of history or English. She is the daughter of Anthony Ritchie, of Midlothian, Md., and belong's to her school's "B" Club, debating team and glee, math and Hi-Y clubs, and co-operates in assembly programs.

Wrote on Merchant Marine.

A paper on "The American Merchant Marine" won first honors at Great Mills for Weschler, second place going to Eva Purcell and third to Helen Yeatman. The project was managed throughout by Jane G. Mattingly, principal and civics teacher. Weschler, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Weschler, of Pearson, Md., is senior class president and a member of the dramatic club and the 4-H Club. He hopes to major in mathematics. history or science, in all of which he rates high marks.

Danner won at Marlboro with a paper on "The Future of America's Railroads," second place going to Jean Trabord and third to Laura Buck. Thomas S. Gwynn, jr., civics teacher, was in charge. Danner recently won a letter of commendation from Time Magazine for achievement in current affairs and is prominent in his school's dramatics, is on the basketball team and a senior class officer. His ambition is to become an accomplished musician.

Moran's essay is entitled "Can America Keep Out of Foreign Wars?" He won the highest general average in his class during the past semester at St. Peter's and takes part in his school's plays. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Moran, of Westernport, Md. Sister M. San Jose, English teacher, in charge of the intramurals, announced second honors to Louis Nasser and third to Mary Mansfield.

Another paper on "The Italo-Ethiopian Dispute" came from Mary Mae Jacobs, of Gaithersburg, whose work was supervised by Wilma Watkins, civics teacher. Miss Jacobs has ranked first in her class throughout her four years in high school, is president of the student council and belong to the glee and dramatic clubs. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Jacobs, of Gaithersburg, and if successful at the American finals will train to become a teacher.

Discussed Jackson.

Another entrant who has stood at the top of her class throughout her four high school years is Ernestine Baugher, who won at Standardsville, Va., with a paper on "Andrew Jackson, Outstanding American Hero." She is the daughter of Ernest Baugher, of Celt, Va. She is an active 4-H Club member and ambitious to specialize in business administration at college.

"Japan's Far Eastern Policy" is the title of Miss Broome's essay. Mary Rilee, senior civics teacher at Louisa, announced James Turner as alternate and third honors to Elsie Buck. Miss Broome, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Broome, of Poindexter, Va., is ambitious for training in journalism or art. She is active in the Patrick Henry Literary Society at her school.

Miss Barger represents the Natural Bridge High School with a paper on "The Social Effects of the Industrial Revolution Since 1850," prepared under supervision of Dan W. Burger, history teacher. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Barger, of Natural Bridge Station. She played the leading role in the senior play, will probably be valedictorian in June, and is senior class treasurer, on the basketball and baseball teams and a member of the Canterbury English Club. She is ambitious for training for a business career.

Flory also wrote on "Japan's Far-Eastern Policy." Gordon E. Smith, Fairfax principal, announced Verna R. Flory as alternate and David Booker third. Flory belongs to his school's tennis, baseball and varsity soccer teams and is an ardent stamp collector. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Byron Flory, of Oakton, Va., and is ambitious for a career in the ministry or the mission field.

Miss Olinger's paper on "The Status of the Child Labor Amendment" won in the New Market project, which was supervised by Mary E. Rupp, civics teacher.

The Post is awarding a handsome silver medal to each school champion and a certificate of honor to two alternates in each school.

The deadline for submission of essays in the Third Washington Post Scholarship Competition is Saturday, March 28, at midnight. School champions are urged to submit their winning papers with credentials, on or before that date, to Louise Engle, competition director, at The Post.)

Johnson Slated As Coast Guard Chief Engineer

Senate Given Nomination of Officer Who Has Served 29 Years.

The appointment of Commander Harvey F. Johnson as engineer-in-chief of the United States Coast Guard has been sent to the Senate for approval, it was learned yesterday.

If this appointment is confirmed, Johnson's rank will be raised to that of captain and his new position will take effect as of December 18, 1935, the retirement date of former Engineer-in-Chief Capt. Robert B. Adams.

Johnson has acted as chief ever since Adams departed on leave last October.

He has served 29 years in the service, 4 of which were at sea, and has visited practically all the Coast Guard stations in the country. He has twice been commended for competency in his duties.

Born in Wheatly, Ark., August 27, 1887, he attended Louisiana State, Tulane and Cornell Universities, graduating from the latter in 1906 with an M. E. degree.

Two years later he was commissioned an ensign in engineering after graduating from the U. S. Revenue Cutter School at Arundel Cove, Md.

During the World War he served as fleet engineer for 44 vessels in a convoy fleet.

Johnson is a member of the American Society of Naval Engineers, the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, Cornell Alumni Club and the Columbia Country Club.

Young Democratic Club Honors Don C. Glassie

Don Caffery Glassie was elected president of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Chevy Chase at its annual meeting yesterday. Alan Graham was elected vice president; John Almond Birch, recording secretary; William Dynes, corresponding secretary; Sidney R. Prince, jr., treasurer, and Frank Ullmer, sergeant at arms.

The club adopted resolutions calling for immediate improvement of Connecticut avenue, between Chevy Chase Circle and Chevy Chase Lake, and urging retention of the Chevy Chase postoffice.

D. C. Numbers Linked to Beard And MacDonald

Reputed Leaders in City's Gambling Ring Are Held Racket's Backers.

Two Washington gamblers, Sam Beard, reputed king of District gambling, and James (Mickey) MacDonald, whose assassination was attempted by Tri-State gangsters last year, were linked to an alleged numbers establishment yesterday.

Police vice-squad raiders stated the two "big shots" were in on the "take," estimated to be $6,000 a week, of a "spot" raided yesterday in the 700 block T street northwest.

Sergt. George Deyoe, who led the raid on the establishment operated under the guise of a cigar store, stated Beard and MacDonald were implicated as the men who "backed the game," by William Spangler, colored, 30, of the 1300 block S street northwest, one of the men arrested in the raid.

Implicated by Spangler.

Spangler implicated Beard and MacDonald while he was being brought to Headquarters, Lieut. George C. Little, chief of the vice squad, said when Spangler was placed in a line-up to be identified he said the "joint" was run by a man named "Pendleton." Lieut. Little said he had never heard of such a man in Washington's gambling world.

Nearly 500 numbers slips and $36 in small change was confiscated by the raiders. Police said the bets were accepted across the counter and that the slips and money were transferred to headquarters immediately.

The number of players who entered the place during the past week, while it was under observation by police, led to the belief it is the largest numbers racket "joint" yet uncovered in the city. Receipts were estimated at $1,000 a day.

Three Booked, Released.

Those booked at headquarters under a charge of operating a lottery were Spangler, Leroy Higgs, 32, and his brother, Ralph, 24, both of the 700 block Eighteenth street northeast. The men were released under bond pending a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on April 14.

Beard is at liberty under bond pending the outcome of his appeal from conviction charges involving the operation of an establishment in the Mather Building on downtown G street.

It was in front of the MacDonald home in suburban Washington that gunmen, hired by rival gamblers to remove him, shot down and killed Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, in October, 1934.

Jordan Jurors Deadlocked In Girl Killing

Former Bus Boy Nervously Paces Cell During Deliberations.

After six hours deliberation, the jury weighing the fate of Thomas Jordan, 30-year-old former convict, charged with the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes in the Garden T Shoppe holdup five years ago, was deadlocked early last night.

As the former bus boy on trial for his life nervously paced his cell, the veniremen requested their dinner. They were taken to a restaurant near District Supreme Court by a marshal and instructed not to talk about the case until they returned to their quarters.

The case went to the jury at 11:43 a. m., after Justice F. Dickinson Letts, presiding at the four-day trial, had issued instructions lasting an hour and 45 minutes.

Justice Letts drew distinction between first and second-degree murder, and told the jurymen they might find the defendant, who allegedly has signed three confessions, guilty of first-degree murder if the evidence showed he shot Mrs. Jaynes that spring night while he was in the act of committing a robbery while armed.

Justice's Instructions.

The judge also told the jury a verdict of second-degree guilt might be returned or a verdict of manslaughter.

As Justice Letts addressed the jury, Jordan, worn by the four days of his trial, shifted nervously. He glared at Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb, who has prosecuted the Government's case, and often let his eyes wander toward the jury box.

Yesterday morning, as Robb offered a stinging rebuttal to the defense plea, the former bus boy, who was on trial because he wrote a letter to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett from Mount Vernon, N. Y., where he sought to marry without fear of prosecution, heard himself described as a "yellow killer and a rat."

Jordan breathed rapidly during Robb's address. In the front row, where he has sat since the trial began, was William Jaynes, white-haired widower of the slain woman, whose testimony may be one of the steps to the chair for Jordan.

Throughout the trial the defense has contended the confessions signed by Jordan in Mount Vernon, N. Y., and here were done under promise of leniency and coaxing.

$101 Sum Taken.

Jordan has denied he ever participated in the robbery and murder—long one of Washington's unsolved murder mysteries.

The Government has held Jordan was the shorter of two black-hooded bandits, who entered the T Shoppe the night of April 3, 1931, and took $101 from the cash register before shooting Mrs. Jaynes.

Gilman B. Garner Found Dead of Gas

Gilman Baker Garner, 27, a Washington cab driver and former Government Printing Office employe, was found dead early yesterday in the kitchen of his Hyattsville home. A gas jet on the stove was open. A pot of water had apparently boiled over and extinguished the flame.

His body was found by two brothers-in-law, George and Victor Frisco, who slept in an adjoining room. Awakened at 6 a. m. by the smell of gas, they said they found Garner seated in a chair, a newspaper on his lap.

It is believed Garner came home from work about 3 a. m. and attempted to cook something before retiring. Acting Coroner Herbert Moffat said an inquest would not be necessary.

Garner is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucile Garner, who was at home at the time; two children, James Irvin, 9 months, and Jean, 2, and his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Garner, of University Park.

James Mulvey Rites Are Held At Arlington

Retired Officer Patrolled White House Grounds for 3 Presidents.

James Mulvey, 76, a retired policeman, who patrolled the White House Grounds during the administrations of Presidents McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Taft, was buried yesterday in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Forty members of the Retired Policemen's Association, of which he was president, served as a guard of honor as the body was lowered into the grave.

In poor health since his retirement 25 years ago, Mr. Mulvey died Monday at his home, 331 Fourteenth street northeast. Surviving him are his wife, Martha Peterson Mulvey, a former cook to President Taft, and a daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. Sidney Burgess.

It was while serving as a patrolman at the White House during Taft's Administraton that Mr. Mulvey met his wife. They were married after a year's courting.

Before joining the Metropolitan Police Force in 1881, Mr. Mulvey served in the United States Army. He was stationed in the Indian territories. He joined the force as a youth of 17 and was a member of the regiment that avenged the Custer massacre.

Mr. Mulvey's first assignment on the police force in the District was to the Southwest section of Washington, then one of the "crime spots" of the city. Working with John M. Whalen, of 221 Fourteenth street northeast, he did a great deal toward "cleaning up" the area. Both Whalen and Mulvey were promoted for their work.

From the Southwest area, Mr. Mulvey was transferred to the New Jersey avenue section of the city and then to the White House. He was retired almost 25 years ago because of poor health and went to New Mexico.

Gen. Johnson, Robbie Engage In Onion War

Complain of Typists, but Latter Retaliate With Cooking Charge.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and "Robbie" are in another fight, an odoriferous fight—a fried onion fight.

Having battled together through bitter clashes that marked the general's terms as NRA administrator the two, Johnson and "Robbie," his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson now are locked in combat with the stenographers of the Democratic National Committee.

It all started, according to report, when the Democratic stenographers are alleged by "Robbie" to have monopolized the mirror space in the comfortable women's sitting room of the Adams Building on F street northwest, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth. "Robbie" entered a complaint and in due course the Democratic committee's office manager remonstrated with the stenographers.

The war was on!

Only Snubs at First.

For some time there was no action more violent than snubs and displays of hauteur when the combatants passed in the halls of the building where Gen. Johnson and "Robbie" and the Democratic stenographers have their offices.

But then came a "break." It came in the pungent odor of cooking onions—an odor that began to spread with some degree of regularity through the halls and into the rooms of the office building.

The stenographers didn't like it. They started tracing the odor to its source and the search led them direct to Gen. Johnson's door. There, the stenographers claim, they got clinching evidence—a sight of "Robbie" on her way from an icebox in the office to a small stove in one corner of the room and bearing, of all things, a bowl of onions.

Counter-Complaint.

The stenographers had their revenge. Promptly a complaint was made to building officials that the light housekeeping must cease, especially light housekeeping that involved fried onions.

The stenographers haven't won yet, but they're pressing the fight.

The elevator operator confirms that the battle is not settled. "Why," he says, "they cook in there all the time, and when the general is in town she always has onions. He must like onions, all right."

Townsend

fice Building, committee members promised "startling" revelations. The rank and file in the House—those opposed to the plan or those afraid to commit themselves—were fervently hopeful that the committee would succeed, for they have been dreading the power of the Townsendites in the forthcoming elections.

Counsel Sullivan, a former prosecutor in Kansas City, Mo., hammered away along two lines yesterday. He wanted to know the "background" of those who are holding out a $200-a-month pension to those 60 or more, and he wanted to know what was being done with the "profits."

Autobiography of Clements.

On the background angle, he started out with Clements, who was asked to sketch his history from the time of his birth to the time he and Dr. Townsend launched the pension plan.

Quite at ease, Clements said he was born 41 years ago in Amarillo, Tex.; that he went to grammar school in Roswell, N. Mex., and El Paso, and finished high school in Fort Worth.

He said he entered the real estate business in 1914 at Long Beach, Calif., where he ultimately encountered Dr. Townsend and hired him as a salesman.

"Have you ever made any particular study of economics?" he was asked.

"You mean from textbooks?"

"Yes."

"No, I've taken no course like that."

"Did you ever make an economic study of the Townsend plan?"

Clements said he had read Department of Commerce reports on sales transactions, and had read many treatises on matters connected with the Townsend plan.

"What treatises have you read?"

"Well, I've read part of the books put out by the Brookings Institution on America's capcity to consume. And I heard a lecture on economics by Prof. Kemmerer of Princeton University."

Vague on Political Economy.

"Did you ever make a study of political economy?"

"Not as such."

"Do you know the difference between economics and political economy?"

"I don't know that I do."

"Have you ever attended college?"

"No."

Clements said he met Dr. Townsend either in 1926 or 1927 in Long Beach. He said he considered him "a brilliant man, a physician of note."

Dr. Townsend, however, decided to devote his talents to selling real estate in Midway City, a development between Long Beach and San Diego, which was being promoted by Clements and two other men. He was to conceive his pension plan in 1933, when the real estate boom had collapsed.

Asked how much money he accumulated in the Midway City development, Clements said his profits were in the form of property rather money.

Tax Query Raises Rumpus.

"How much property did you accumulate?" Sullivan asked him. "Was it worth $500 or $1,000,000?"

"Well, it was worth more than $500 but considerably less than $1,000,000."

Representative Moritz (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a friend of the Townsendites, leaped from a spectator's seat and shouted:

"This committee was authorized to investigate the Townsend organization, not an individual."

"You are out of order," said Chairman Bell, and the questioning went on.

A little later, Clements, with some heat, denied that the early bookkeeping accounts of the Townsend organization were "in a mess and unintelligible."

Sullivan read to Clements parts of a speech made in the House by Representative Kramer (Democrat), of California, in which Kramer charged that the House investigators were using "back alley" tactics in seeking information about the Townsend organization.

Clements said that, on the contrary, the investigators had been "genteel and courteous."

Thereupon Sullivan held up a copy of the Townsend National Weekly, which contained a story about the "high-handed tactics" of the investigators.

"I suppose," said Clements, blandly, "that the Townsend Weekly placed too much credence in the Congressional Record."

The spectators laughed—the only laughter heard during the day, except that excited by the elderly, bearded individual who, according to his custom, fell asleep at the hearing.

Clements said that Dr. Townsend first mentioned his pension plan in the fall of 1933.

"You were no longer associated in the real estate business then, were you?"

"No. He was assistant health officer in Long Beach."

The pension idea, Clements said, was "bandied" back and forth until January 24, 1934, when OARP was incorporated. By December 1, 1934, he said, the plan had aroused such enthusiasm that it was decided to move to Los Angeles.

What Happens to Money, Query?

The committee members appeared interested to learn that, even before this move was made, the Townsend organization had piled up $43,295 in a Long Beach bank.

The afternoon session was interrupted by a recess while investigators went to the Townsend headquarters in the Southern Building to get needed documents.

Thereafter Counsel Sullivan and the committee members concentrated on the prime question in the investigation—what happens to the money that flows into the Townsend coffers from those who think they are investing in $200-a-month pensions.

Clements explained how the Townsend organization, once it began to boom, laid out regions and areas. Washington, he said, was the headquarters of the Southern region.

Generally speaking, he said, 60 per cent of the money collected went to the national headquarters and the remaining 40 per cent to State area managers—men like Margett.

If 100 persons got together and formed a Townsend Club, he said, it would forward $25 to the State area manager as the price of its charter.

"Is it fair to say," he was asked, "that of every $25 thus received, $15 would go into the treasury of the parent organization?"

"Yes."

"And $10 goes to the State area manager?"

"Yes."

Get Charter for Money.

"What does the Townsend Club get for its $25?"

"They receive a receipt, a book on the Townsend organization, a charter and membership cards."

"Anything else?"

"Yes, a weekly bulletin."

"Is any of the money returned to the club?"

"No."

Clements said that members of Townsend clubs were expected to contribute dues "up to" 25 cents a month. He was reminded that, under a resolution adopted at the Chicago convention of the organization, each club was asked to forward to headquarters 10 cents a month for each member—the so-called "quota."

"But that resolution," Clements protested, "has not been lived up by any manner or means."

State area managers like Margett, Clements said, got 20 per cent of the dues money forwarded by the clubs.

"The parent organization has no knowledge of what Margett does with his profits. Is that true?"

"That's true."

Unconcerned About Money.

"And as a matter of fact, the parent organization has no concern about what happens to that money? You are only interested in the money due the parent organization?"

"That's true, except that we are interested in seeing that the club gets a receipt."

Among the State area managers whose "background" Clements knew were a clergyman, a lawyer, a cattleman and a railway conductor.

The hearing will be resumed at 10:30 this morning.

South Hits G. O. P. Espousal.

Joe Bly, of Route 2, Asheville, N. C., yesterday sent The Post a copy of a letter he had forwarded to Dr. Francis E. Townsend, saying:

"We feel that your uninvited espousal of the Republican Party has closed the door to sympathy for the Townsend Plan among Southern Democrats.

"While, in one sense, we cannot condone your ruthlessness in letting down several of your supporters who were to have been our opponents in the primary, in another sense we feel grateful that you, personally, have removed the Townsend Plan as an issue from all Democratic primaries.

"It should be quite obvious to you, sir, that a candidate cannot take oath to support the Democratic Party and in the same breath proclaim the mystic beauties of the Townsend Dream."

Aid Denies Personal Gain.

San Francisco, March 26 (AP).—State Area Manager Edward J. Margett of the Townsend Pensions Organization, declared today that commissions paid him were $500 or $600 a month more than reported by a committee hearing in Washington, but denied he was profiting personally. The commissions are used to pay all Townsend Plan organization expenses in this area, he asserted.

New Noblesse Oblige.

Whatever the reason that persuaded Representative Meeks not to stand on his so-called "Congressional immunity" when summoned to Police Court yesterday, he is to be commended for his action. By presenting himself as merely one more citizen caught speeding within the city limits and by taking the consequences without flinching, he has done much to enhance general respect for those laws, the flouting of which has led to so much confusion and tragedy. Similarly, Judge McMahon is entitled to the thanks of Washington for the unhesitant manner in which he applied the law in this case.

The case should serve to turn a new leaf in the long story of the relations between Washington's law enforcement officials and members of Congress. Senator Borah and others have long since made it clear that, all Constitutional provisions notwithstanding, "there is no exemption, no immunity" to differentiate between a Senator or Representative found guilty of violating a traffic regulation and an ordinary citizen arrested on the same count. It appears that these authoritative opinions are at last beginning to bear fruit.

Now that Representative Meeks has faced up to the situation squarely, and by so doing has made certain what everyone has wanted to assume—that arrogance and a demand for special privileges are not characteristic of men of Congressional rank—a new sense of noblesse oblige has been established. Hereafter Congressmen who fall back upon the mythical theory of Congressional immunity in case of Washington traffic violations, will put themselves in a position too embarrassing for self-respecting National legislators to occupy.

An Inadequate Tax Program.

The House Ways and Means Committee has at last completed a tentative tax plan which is to be the basis for open hearings. While a good many changes have been made in the original proposals regarding taxation of undistributed corporate net income, in response to criticism, they do not remove the basic objections to this revolutionary innovation in our system of corporate taxation. Moreover, it has become necessary to reduce revenue estimates from the new taxes on corporate surplus and income to $591,000,000.

By delaying repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, and reclaiming 90 per cent of impounded processing taxes, it is hoped to obtain $799,000,000 additional during the coming year—approximately the amount for which the President asked. However, after deducting non-recurrent returns, the estimated increase would total only $616,000,000.

Notwithstanding the inadequacy of this sum, the committee members are resolved to drop all recommendations for processing taxes, or other special excises. They are willing to risk the serious economic dislocation that may result from punitive taxes designed to force the distribution of corporate surpluses, but they lack the courage to impose unpopular taxes upon articles of general consumption either in the form of processing or sales taxes.

Unbiased Jury Service.

By enacting a law permitting Government employes to sit on juries Congress attempted last year to improve jury service in the District. It is an acute disappointment that that statute should now throw the machinery of law enforcement into confusion. As a matter of course the opinion of Justice Groner should be appealed to the Supreme Court so that the elegibility for jury service of individuals drawing compensation from the Government will be finally determined.

The right of every individual to trial by an impartial jury is one of the foremost safeguards of personal liberty. Quite properly it should be closely guarded by the courts. Justice Groner declared the jury service law unconstitutional on the ground that employes of the Government might not be impartial in cases where Government interests are involved. In a great majority of cases that issue would never arise, and Federal employes would doubtless serve with complete lack of bias. Yet the court cannot be reasonably criticized for a broad interpretation of the constitutional safeguard for the protection of a few individuals whose interests might be jeopardized.

While this ruling is being appealed, it would be most unfortunate if the validity of all indictments and convictions since the act became effective should be questioned. There is no reasonable ground for the assumption that prejudice has entered into the many cases that have been handled under the new system. On the contrary, the type of jury service rendered has probably been superior to that obtained under the old plan. It is to be hoped, therefore, that a way can be found through which the action of District juries including Federal workers will be permitted to stand, except in cases where suspicion of prejudice has been aroused.

Mr. Tugwell's Octopus.

Attention is once more directed to the amorphous Resettlement Administration by Director Tugwell's plan to place 450,000 of his wards under the soil conservation program of the new AAA. Experts are working out a formula under which AAA benefits can be used to help repay RA loans. There seems to be no question as to compliance on the part of rehabilitated farmers, for the management of their land and households is already controlled by the Resettlement Administration.

Talk of co-operation between the AAA and RA, however, immediately raises the question as to why there should be any division between them. One purpose of the Resettlement Administration is to initiate a program to counteract soil erosion, aid reforestation and flood control. Since conservation of soil has now become the chief objective of the AAA, and special funds have been added to the Agriculture Department supply bill for the purchase of forest lands and prevention of erosion, any reason that may have justified the creation of a special agency for these purposes seems to have disappeared.

Of course, these objectives are only a few of many sponsored by the Resettlement Administration. Its loans to farmers clearly cut across a function assigned to the Farm Credit Administration. That agency makes loans to farmers for almost every conceivable purpose connected with their occupation. Certainly if there is any further need of extending credit to farmers, the FCA could properly handle it. Some of the RA's outlays for the benefit of farmers are virtually grants. But here again it is hard to justify the existence of a special agency to administer a particular type of relief to a favored group of clients.

Along with these manifold activities, the RA is engaged in the construction of suburban communities. If use of Federal funds for that purpose can be justified at all, the task should have been assigned to the Housing Division of PWA. Can there be any possible justification for giving one gangling agency $31,000,000 to spend for suburban housing, $4,382,000 for loans to co-operatives, $20,000,000 for the purchase of submarginal lands and $11,129,000 for gifts to destitute individuals? The patent unsoundness of such administrative policy is further emphasized by the fact that in each case these far-flung activities encroach upon the functions of established governmental agencies.

President Roosevelt recently launched a study of the New Deal's administrative setup, apparently for the purpose of bringing about sweeping realignments. The investigation committee might well begin with the bureaucratic octopus through which Mr. Tugwell and 13,000 employes are planning to spend approximately $365,000,000. No exhaustive research should be necessary to indicate the wisdom of liquidating this vast sprawling agency and transferring its legitimate activities to regular executive departments.

May We Talk About Italy?

Advocates of the "Little Red Rider" are unquestionably on the run. If other proof were lacking, the fact that they have now swung around into full support of the corporation counsel's interpretation of the present law would indicate the extent of the shifting they have deemed desirable.

When Mr. Prettyman first interpreted the law to mean that the facts regarding communism may be taught, provided its doctrines are in no way advocated, his opinion was bitterly denounced by the witch-hunters. Now they are fully cognizant of the preponderant sentiment against this ridiculous encroachment upon education. By accepting Mr. Prettyman's view of the law they hope to save the "red rider" from outright repeal.

In spite of this admission of weakness, it is well to remember that Mr. Blanton's clique has the inside track. Inaction would mean victory for them, while the passage of the Sisson repeal bill by both the House and Senate is essential to remove the present stigma upon the District's educational system. Mr. Sisson's efforts have been given admirable support, but it is hoped that his supporters will not become overconfident and relinquish their efforts. For the bill might easily be lost if its consideration should be delayed to the latter part of the session.

In the meantime the corporation counsel's office might well review Mr. Prettyman's opinion. Since his admirable distinction was drawn between advocating communism and teaching the facts of Soviet Russia's government and economic structure, Mussolini has taken Italy a long step down the Russian path. Does this mean that history teachers must now guard their tongues when mentioning Italy?

Since the "Red Rider" has effectively eliminated all mention of Russia from the schools, its advocates might consistently demand that textbook references to Mussolini be now verboten. With Hitler making advances toward the corporate state, Germany, too, may logically come under the ban.

Indeed, there are certain indications that before long it may be illegal to mention many practices of American government in the schools of Washington.

A Wrong Approach.

The provisions of the so-called anti-chain store bill, which has been reported upon favorably by the House Judiciary Committee, are too complicated and too technical to permit of detailed editorial analysis. However, the main purpose of the Patman bill, now before the House, and its companion measure, sponsored by Senator Robinson, is plain. The projected legislation is aimed at suppression of various forms of price discrimination, especially the practice of granting discounts to those who purchase goods in large quantities. Such discounts are not banned, but they are hedged about with numerous restrictions and reservations designed to minimize the advantages of large-scale buying.

Proponents of the bill defend it as a means of combatting unfair competitive practices and giving equality of opportunity to the small distributor. Opponents, on the other hand, declare that it would injure the small retailer by encouraging large distributors to extend their activities into the manufacturing and producing field. Still other objections are raised by defenders of the chain stores, who maintain that the proposed changes would subsidize inefficient middlemen at the expense of the consumer. They assert that there is no danger that the chains will obtain a monopoly by crowding out small retailers, as there is active competition among chain store organizations and little evidence that efficient independents are being routed.

Moreover, the Federal Trade Commission has the power, under the existing anti-trust laws, to prohibit discriminatory practices that tend to create a monopoly. Thus a prominent rubber company was ordered recently to "cease and desist" from discriminating in favor of a big customer in selling automobile tires, on the ground that independent dealers were being driven out of business. Without passing judgment upon the wisdom or desirability of this kind of intervention, it is evident that the Government already possesses extensive control over price policies.

The fundamental objection to the Patman bill is that it attempts to substitute a rigid system of legal control over competitive practices that must be continuously adapted to the varying needs of different times, places and industries. It does not follow that industries should be left free to charge what they choose without regard to the social consequences of discrimination. Serious evils, demanding governmental correction, undoubtedly exist under a free competitive system. But they are often abuses that do not lend themselves to exact definition, because the same practice may be socially justified under certain circumstances while definitely injurious under different conditions.

Industries could, under voluntary agreements, deal effectively with price discrimination and other distributive problems of an anti-social character. With intelligent and co-operative governmental supervision to prevent exploitation of the public, or of other producing and distributing groups, they could be left to solve their own problems or be permitted to fight them out to public advantage. Certainly we do not need more legislation calculated to hamper the smooth functioning of the producing and distributive mechanism, while establishing an ineffective but oppressive bureaucratic control over the price-making process.

Recently there passed within 1,200,000 miles of the earth a rock about one-third mile in diameter. With all the troubles the world is having, it does seem a great pity that the elements should set in throwing rocks at it.

"In South America members of a jungle tribe often gnaw a crude kind of rubber to allay the pangs of hunger," reports an explorer. In North America a drug store sandwich serves this purpose.

And those who achieve freedom don't know what to do with it. Now the Filipinos say they want a congress.

The Curtain Rises.

George Jean Nathan in The Saturday Review.

To the student of theatrical phenomena, it becomes more and more evident that the critical tendency of the present-day American stage is toward the literary drama. By literary drama is not meant the dramatic hybrid which confuses the library with the stage, nor yet the drama whose composition suggests the man of letters who regards the theater as a medium beneath his lofty dignity. What is meant by the phrase is drama, sound in its theatrical self, that at the same time has in its web and woof the silken threads of literature and that, apart from its purely stage appeal, merits the consideration of publication as literature.

Two elements have contributed to this. The disappearance of what is loosely to be designated as the old gallery and rear balcony trade—the present backbone of the motion-picture audience—has been a critical godsend to the reputable theater and to reputable drama. The second item is the increased sophistication of the residual audience itself, its discontent with the kind of plays upon which it often formerly looked kindly, or with a passive kindness, and its avid search for drama of a more exalted nature. The epiphany of the more literary drama is the result.

Two-Term Limit?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we have not lost the desire for a democracy, we should pause to consider some measures which promise to retard or remedy this trend. Among many plans which have been in the public mind, one seems worthy to be further stressed. Let us consider an amendment to the Constitution to the following effect: "Neither the President, a Senator nor a member of the House of Representatives shall be eligible to serve for more than two consecutive terms."

If controlled by such a provision, it would be the impulse of a Senator or a Congressman to serve his constituents discreetly throughout his first term and would be their special representative. This experience would broaden his views of National problems and prepare him to make a bid for recognition as a National figure. If he possessed real qualities of leadership he would earn the title of "an elder statesman," and might hope to be called to an executive or judicial position. Furthermore, after an interim of one term he would become eligible to serve for another period of two terms. To men of the type, second terms would become periods of calm reflection, with freedom from worry that would be conducive to constructive statesmanship.

It will be apparent that this change would make it more difficult—practically impossible—for minority organizations to perpetuate their influence in government. Those who were defeated for re-election would doubtless be viewed, more or less unjustly, as wanting in leadership, but a retirement due to constitutional limitations would not dim the halo of honorable service, and a larger number of such men living the life of a common citizen would have a wholesome influence. GUY CLINTON.

Takoma Park, Md., March 18.

Canal Alternatives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I disagree with Mrs. Willis' letter of March 21, regarding the proposed Florida Canal and her comparison of same with the Panama Canal? The later reduces the distance from New York to Frisco by 8,000 miles and saves many days of travel. The Florida Canal would shorten the distance from the Atlantic to the Gulf by only 300 to 500 miles, depending on your port of destination, and the time saved would be almost nil as a 20-knot vessel could sail around the peninsula in the same time a ship could travel through the canal. (A ship's speed in considerably reduced while traveling through a canal.) Ninety-five per cent of the shipping would doubtless prefer sailing around Florida to paying tolls through the canal. The canal would not begin to pay for itself like the Panama waterway is doing.

Take the $200,000,000 the canal will cost and erect a $1,000,000 post-office in 200 Florida towns. Or, patterning after some of the Western irrigation projects, use the $200,000,000 in draining the Everglades, invite a lot of settlers to farm the land thus reclaimed, then notify them there is an over-production of farm produce and pay them for not raising anything. G. R. C.

End Justifies The Means?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Intemperate unfairness is an unworthy weapon when used editorially to mold public opinion. The rules of fair practice are not observed when the public is misled by editorial conclusions based on one-sided evidence and the concealing of major facts. The element of good faith enters into the relation of the press to the people and problems it deals with.

This applies directly to your editorial treatment of the facts, the issues and the men involved in the Senate investigation of lobbyists and lobbying. Failing to emphasize the need and purpose of the investigation, you have sought to discredit it by intemperate denunciation of the methods of the committee—while ignoring evidence that these methods are made valid by precedent as the proper, and often the only, way to obtain information necessary to protect the public interest.

My opinion would not be worthy of notice if it were not shared by many widely honored for their sound judgment and freedom from political partisanship. It is shared also by certain editors of high standing, who have never been accused of yielding to direct or indirect partisan or financial control. In their editorial columns they have granted Senator Black his day in court. You have not. You have denounced him in two editorials since March 20. On that day he stated the case for the committee on the Senate floor, submitting sustaining evidence and arguments. Your subsequent editorials have ignored that statement, including its clear refutation of the charge that he sought to deny the right of freedom of the press.

To keep within allotted space, I close with a request. I ask that you review your position, fairly and in the light of the full facts. I ask that you exercise fair play and keep good faith with your public by permitting the substance of the committee's statement of its case to appear in The Post. This can be done in less than the combined space occupied by your hostile editorials. I ask that you then deal fairly with the committee's actions and methods, including the supporting precedents and the imperative need for their adoption in this investigation.

Higher Public Salaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Pay envelopes of movie stars and captains of industry" as reported in this morning's Post suggests the following comparison:

Salary of a New York corporation president (as reported)	$364,432

Some Other Salaries.

President Roosevelt	$ 75,000
His Cabinet of ten	150,000
Senator Borah	10,000
Senator Byrnes	10,000
Senator Harrison	10,000
Senator Norris	10,000
Senator Nye	10,000
Senator Robinson	10,000
Why go on? Let's balance	79,432
	$364,432

We are told so often, so earnestly, that the big salaries paid the business tycoons are necessary to secure the required ability, and are so solemnly assured that our whole social structure is based on the stimulation our matchless system affords through its cash rewards, that we must conclude the above comparison explains the break down in public service these tellers and assurers so often bewail.

It is said the Administration is a flop and Congress a pain. Well, why not? Why expect our public servants to take their duties seriously at the salaries they receive? There is not a corporation head in the country with greater responsibilities than any one of the above officials. Pay each of them what this corporation head receives, a total of $6,195,344 instead of the $285,000 they now get, and, according to the philosophy that prevails in our business world, we may expect these several public officers to respond with their whole hearted and unstinted service.

Very Pleasant Reading.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently there appeared an editorial in The Post in appreciation of my ministry in Washington.

I have been ill since then and have been unable to write you until this moment. May I now acknowledge with sincere thanks that editorial. I assure you nothing has quite so touched me in the 12 years of my ministry as this simple appreciation which appeared in The Post of Tuesday, March 10.

Please be assured that I have been deeply moved by this expression of good will toward me. When I go to New York The Post will always come to my home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing you as to the unfairness of the letter published in The Post on March 23 entitled "Credit Due Beltsville CCC."

There are four companies in this area. It is true that the 370th Company did very good work at this time, but there were at least two companies that remained after they had returned to thier slumbers. Camp A-1 or 2301 Company returned to camp after 10 a. m. on Thursday and so did Camp A-2.

You might also mention that these camps were under wonderful supervision of both officers and technical service. M. A. B.

The Theater And The Color Line.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to express my surprise that The Post should give space to the several letters it has printed advocating opening the theaters in Washington to colored people.

I assume the authors of these letters are Negroes for it seems inconceivable that any decent, self-respecting white person could have written them. The idea is probably the fruit and flower of the "New Dispensation," which is the advocate of the "social uplift" and the "more abundant life" without regard to race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

The Negro seems to be the only race that has no racial pride, as indicated by his desire to thrust himself into places where he is not wanted.

The admission of Negroes to the theaters patronized by white people could have but one possible result. They would no longer be patronized by white people, but would be left entirely to Negroes, and as there are not enough Negroes in Washington who have the means or desire to attend the theaters these places of amusement and entertainment would go bankrupt and be closed in a short time, which answers the economic phase of the question alluded to by some of the writers.

Furthermore, their admission to the theaters would be but an entering wedge for admission to our hotels, restaurants and other public places frequented by white people, and the privilege could not be denied them upon any logical grounds.

In the interest of the Negro himself, of our social well-being, and of the peace and good order of this community such a proposition should not be given a moment's consideration. A. S. L.

Washington, March 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In printing the letters of the three correspondents regarding the "Theater Color Line," you have given us one side of the question. I think you should now print the other side.

While I believe in the Negro being granted full economic and franchise equality with the white man I most certainly resent the Negro's insistence that he be granted social equality with the white man.

Let him make as much or more money as I, or live as well or better, but let him stay with his own race socially. You may call this prejudice if you will but it's my story and I'll stick to it.

The colored person in the District is treated extremely well and is placed on an economic and social plane countenanced in very few places in this country.

He has his own theaters and should patronize them and allow the white man to enjoy his own shows. To allow the Negro to attend our shows would only add to racial feeling. If any one doubts this let him investigate conditions in Pennsylvania since the equal rights bill went into effect.

The Post Impressionist

'Twixt Cup And Lip.

Post Office, Friday.

THE decidedly unequivocal Major has put this Column in a decidedly equivocal position by a letter received from him yesterday. For he attacks some advice given by The Post's own Mary Haworth.

And we don't like it.

We don't like it:

Because it is launched by a man against a woman;

Because it is launched against a woman whom we admire;

And because it is launched against that woman in an instance wherein we ourselves believe her to be quite correct.

The recipient of Miss Haworth's advice had told her that he was 21 years of age, a German who came to America when 7, a medical student resolved to return soon to his native land for the completion of his studies and determined not to marry until after that completion—if then!

* * *

He said he'd met several girls "in their early twenties" whom he liked; but, after "going with a girl regularly for any length of time," he always found—unique experience!—that the party of the second part would hint at marriage.

"For eight months I have been going with a girl who is unusually attractive and whose company I enjoy tremendously. I know any normal girl of 22 may reasonably be expected to include marriage in her plans for the not-too-distant future, yet I have no desire to ask this particular girl to wait for me (to marry her), even should she be willing to wait. My question is this: Is it wrong and selfish of me to 'monopolize her time' when I have no intention of marrying anyone in the near future?"

To which Miss Haworth—we hope we're not infringing any copyright!—responds with a firm affirmative:

"If you spend all your leisure time in this girl's company, even though she may realize you haven't yet fallen in love with her, and may have heard that you are bent on a career which precludes the possibility of marriage for years to come, still it is only natural that she should trust to propinquity and all the winning devices known to women to aid her in overthrowing your carefully laid plans of bachelorhood. What's more, since you do find the girl so attractive and her society so tremendously enjoyable, there's a possibility that you are riding for a fall—into love."

Now, when the Post-Impressionist read this advice—and he counts that day lost whose slow declining sun sees him with Miss Haworth's matutinal column unread—he approved her words with his whole heart.

* * *

Then along came the Major's counterblast!

We don't want to print it—but we have to, at least in part. The Major, you must know, is a political power in the town where we have maintained a voting residence ever since we achieved a voting age. When things go his way, he has influence here at Washington. And we are informed that a national election has been set for the first Tuesday following the first Monday of next November.

* * *

He says:

"Of course, because she's a woman, Miss Haworth can't see anything except one side of the question—the feminine side—and yet, also of course and also because she's a woman, she gives the whole feminine case away. 'All the winning devices known to' her sex! In her heart of hearts she's hell-bent for having that girl hook this boy . . .

* * *

"Anybody can tell, from his letter, how innocent he is—a poor young foreigner! Why doesn't Miss Haworth spare a little pity for him? But no, all she worries about is the chance that the girl'll miss a marriage.

"Well, it's a fat chance—at least in the present case!

"How old's this girl-child whose affections are being trifled with? She admits to 22—and will Miss Haworth try to tell me that any girl of that age, in this Age, has any affections which can be trifled with without her full knowledge and consent? I mean: Every modern girl of what she calls 22 (every one, that is, who can make a fellow believe she's doing him a favor by letting him buy her sodas and movie tickets for her) is mighty well able to manage her affections—and to manage the fellow, too.

"You can bet this demure damsel knows all about the kid's plans for not marrying—and intends to crash 'em. A boy's 21 is years younger than a girl's 22, and if this boy takes Miss Haworth's advice and walks out on this girl, why, the girl'll never forgive Miss Haworth.

"But he won't walk out.

* * *

Town Hall Panel

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Troubles of Genius.

MRS. RICHARD OULIHAN, the guiding genius of Town Hall of Washington, has been having her difficulties this week. One of her duties is to corral each week a number of distinguished and intellectual gentlemen willing and eager to sit in starched shirts before the lorgnetted gaze of that august gathering and ask pungent questions of the speaker of the evening. Last year when William Green spoke at Town Hall the Hamlet-named John L. Lewis was on the panel and those who were present recall the sharp questions he shot, not so much at Mr. Green, but at a "lobbyist for the interests" who also was on the platform.

John Lewis threw his head forward, stuck out his under jaw, and from out of his wealth of experience recalled the bloody days of Herrin and other labor battles, much to the discomfiture of the long-tailed and red-faced lobbyists. That affair does not rank with some of Jack Lewis' major appearances, yet after a year I recall it well. A lot of water has gone over the dam since then, though. There has been the Atlantic City convention, for example, when Mr. Lewis and his boys took their celebrated walk over the issue of industrial versus craft unionism. And, of course, there was the annual convention of the miners here when Lewis, with admirably skillful tactics, more or less put the uncomfortable but still fighting Bill Green on the spot.

• • • •

THE other day Mrs. Oulihan was preparing her panel for this coming Sunday's Town Hall meeting at the Hotel Shoreham. She found herself in something of a dilemma. Should she invite William Green to sit on the panel? This was suggested by a newspaper friend of hers whom she consulted. Why? Because John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, will be the speaker, and his topic will be "Industrial Organization." I tried to find out yesterday if Mrs. Oulihan had gone through with her plan, but she had fled town. And Mr. Green was "not available." But whether Jack and Bill face each other—it will be the first time since the famous battle at Constitution Hall—or not, this Sunday's meeting of Town Hall ought to be filled with fireworks.

Lewis is going ahead full blast with his plans for industrial organization, determined that this is Labor's way, whatever the immediate cost. Just at present there is no other question, which so excites anyone interested in organized labor. You hear it discussed at dinner tables, and even the white collar unionists are playing with the idea. Say so much as "What do you think . . ." to a union man and you may be certain of hearing either an impassioned plea for the industrial unionism or a violent diatribe against it. And if the union man happens to be engaged in any one of the myriad branches of the building trades, watch out! It's a particularly sore spot in that quarter.

• • • •

THIS last is the reason why an incurable practical joker suggested to Mrs. Oulihan that if she really wanted to make the Sunday evening prayer meeting of the Town Hall addicts a particularly well-attended and noisy affair she invite some leader of the building trades to sit on the panel. The Town Hall, of course, needs something like this. For the past several weeks it has been getting along very well without any outstanding verbal disagreements and it seems to your correspondent that now is the time for something to be done about this undue placidity.

But whoever Mrs. Oulihan does inveigle to the Shoreham for the purpose of baiting Jack Lewis, those who attend will be assured of a good time. Give Mr. Lewis an audience which is with him and he will soar to heights of rhetorical brilliance, carrying his listeners with him into heavens of oratorical delight. Give him a hostile audience and, with fists and fighting phrases, he will challenge any man or woman in the house. Even in a small crowd in the lobby of the Willard, Fighting Jack Lewis knows how to put on a grand show.

• • • •

ASIDE from the acting—which wells out of a depth of sincerity for his cause—Lewis will be worth devoting a Sunday evening to, for his topic is of utmost importance. There is no one, in Washington or elsewhere, who can reel off the facts and figures in behalf of industrial unionism better than old John. He lives, breathes and even eats his subject. And it is one of the most important questions in the country today, for if Lewis and his followers can throw organized labor over into the camp of industrial unionism the whole complexion of organized labor in the United States will be changed. Lewis from the mines is determined to break forever the tradition left to labor by the little cigarmaker named Gompers.

And, although I have heard Lewis on this topic more than once and have often seen him in action, I, for one, have a date this Sunday evening at the Hotel Shoreham. It doesn't matter who Mrs. Oulihan gets for the panel, whether they be friends or foe. John will be ready for them and when he lets forth his booming voice dishes will rattle in the hotel dining room and rafters eight stories up will shake. For John learned to shout in depths of the earth and now when he speaks he breaks the demi-tasses without shame. Twenty minutes after you hear him you may not be as convinced as you were when the shouting and tumult died, but you will have had a swell time.

Labor's Rise In Japan

Shakai Taishuto Party Plus Independents Show Promise.

By Frank H. Hedges.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Tokyo.

THE general election for members of the Lower House of the Imperial Diet was held two weeks ago, resulting in a victory for the group of parties supporting the Okada ministry and showing an entirely unsuspected strength and growth on the part of the proletariat parties. The results of the election had scarcely become known, however, before some 1,000 or so soldiers, led by a handful of captains and lieutenants, murdered three of the highest officials in Japan, wounded two others and held out against the loyal army troops for more than four days in their attempted coup d'etat to change virtually the entire machinery of government in the empire.

So startling was this rebellion, as it can now be officially called despite the small number of men participating in it, and so full of significance for the present and the future were its revelations that the elections dropped almost entirely from the public mind.

The results of the general election are startling, nevertheless, despite the more spectacular and fundamentally more important developments since intervening. The Okada ministry, a super-party government and one claiming to be "national," but which was quite evidently based on the combined support of the Minseito, Kokumin Domei and Showakai political parties, made every effort to see that a "clean election" was conducted, that graft and corruption were eliminated or held to a minimum, and that the electorate was given the chance to register at the polls its real sentiments without fear or favor.

THE ministry succeeded admirably. True, many voters stayed at home that day, fearing that they might make an unintentional mistake and violate the strict election law and so face prosecution. As a result the total vote cast was less than had been hoped for, but that it was an honest vote is proved by its results.

Only one election has been lost by the party in power for many years past in Japan and the present was no exception, but it is generally recognized that the victory of the government-supporting Minseito and the unexpectedly severe losses of the opposition Seiyukai were not due to government interference or manipulation. Rather, they were in part approval of the Minseito as the more liberal of Japan's two major parties, and in part disapproval of the political maneuvering of the Seiyukai, plus the fact that that party is at present full of internal dissension and lacks genuine leadership. The defeat of the Seiyukai's president, Dr. Kisaburo Suzuki, brought this out vividly. It was an unexpected defeat, as was also that of a high adviser to the same party, Hiekichi Ogawa, formerly minister of railways.

Minseito (pro-government)	205
Seiyukai (opposition)	174
Showakai (pro-government)	20
Shakai Taishuto (labor, or proletariat)	18
Kokumin Domei (pro-government)	15
Other labor groups	6
Independents	28
Total number of seats	466

This shows a clear majority of seven for the three government groups, and some of those listed as independents belong in the same category. Nevertheless, it was generally believed that the Okada ministry would have to resign, as it claimed to be a "national government" and not based on party support, whereas the election showed clearly that it was responsible to the three-party coalition. The scheduled plan was to summon an extraordinary session of the Diet to convene April 20 for a three-week period, following which Premier Okada would resign and a new man, probably a bureaucrat, but just possibly a Minseito leader, form the succeeding government.

• • • •

ALL this went by the board with the attempted revolution of February 26-29. Although he escaped unharmed after having been officially proclaimed as "dead" during this period, Premier Okada could under no circumstances remain longer in office and his resignation, as well as those of his official family, was at once tendered. Any Japanese premier would have had to resign under much less strenuous circumstances, since the doctrine of extensive responsibility is still recognized in public life throughout the East. This should be well understood abroad by this time, since not a year goes by that it does not crop up in actual practice in Japan. The suicide of a first division battalion commander because some of the men under him took part in the abortive revolution is another case in point, as is the resignation of the minister of war last August 17, when Lieut. Col. Saburo Aizawa assassinated the inspector general of military education, Lieut. Gen. Tetsuzan Nagata.

Presumably the imperial edict summoning the Diet into extraordinary session on approximately April 20 will be issued shortly and the new government will have to face the new house of representatives. This time it will, as a result of the recent incident, face a united House, unless it be the 24 Labor members. The outgoing Okada ministry had long ceased to be a national government, but this latest crisis has placed its successor in this enviable position.

What measures the government will introduce for debate and passage and how they will fare are of some importance, but it is expected that they will be largely perfunctory. The most important bill will be that authorizing the budget. It is thought that this will be largely the same as the draft budget prepared by the late finance minister, Koreikyo Takahashi. Other measures will deal with relief of distressed agrarian districts and, probably, certain economic problems, especially those tending to place business in purely Japanese hands and less and less under foreign control.

The only effective opposition, if any, to the government, and it will be able to accomplish nothing more than verbal attacks, will come from the proletariat benches. The result of the elections makes this possible.

UNDER Japanese parliamentary rule, any organized group in the lower house with a membership of 25 becomes a negotiating body and is allowed its own lobby and the right to drive bargains with other groups. The Shakai Taishuto won 18 seats in the house. Six other seats were won by Labor candidates who were not, but probably will now become members of that party. Only one more M. P. need be won over from among the Independents or one of the stronger parties to make the Shakai Taishuto a negotiating body, and it is virtually certain to gain one or more such recruit. In the last Diet, Labor had only five seats and could exercise little influence even in tactics of obstructing and heckling. Not so in the approaching extraordinary session.

What is of great portent is that it now seems certain when an election is held again four years from now, or sooner if the usual dissolution occurs, the Labor Party will win sufficient seats to hold the balance of power between the more powerful Minseito and Seiyukai. In that case, which appears now to be an almost certainty, it will be in a strong position indeed. No measure will be able to pass without its approval, and it can bargain for the enactment of a least a part of its program.

This promise of a substantial increase of seats following the next general election is not mere prophecy but is predicated on the actual strength shown by the Shakai Taishuto candidates ran far ahead There is a form of proportional representation in the Japanese electoral system, whereby from three to five M. P.'s are returned from each electoral district, according to population. Each franchise-holder in the district can cast but one ballot for one man, however. This means that, in a five-representative district where any group controls 20 per cent of the votes, it can be certain of returning one of the five M. P.'s from its own ranks if only it concentrates on a single candidate.

To make certain of this the Shakai Taishuto entered only single candidates in all but a few districts, throwing the entire Labor vote to him. In most cases these Shakai Taishuto candidate ran far ahead of their victorious opponents in the number of votes gained. For instance, in one Tokyo district the Labor man elected went in by 30,000 votes. The next highest successful candidate, a Minseito man, was elected by but 6,000. If, in that particular district, there had been several Labor candidates and these 30,000 Labor votes properly distributed among them, they would all have been returned.

Nippon Still Distrusts Reform Platforms, However.

• • • •

THIS was the first election in which Labor has scored a really notable victory. Ever since its embarkation on the sea of politics, now nearly two decades ago, Labor in Japan has been badly divided within itself and so has failed to achieve what it might. Less than a year ago most of this dissension was healed and the proletariat faced the recent election with a united front. Not all of Labor's strength comes from factory workers and farmers by any means, but it recruits to its banners a large part of the intelligentsia of Japan, just as it does in other lands. In this most recent election, undoubtedly many votes were cast for Shakai Taishuto men as a protest against the Old Line parties. In other words, Labor did not gain them so much as Seiyukai and Minseito lost them. This movement is, however, expected to increase in the coming years.

Labor may win the balance of power at the next general election and so be able to effect some of the reforms which it champions, but the time when it will be strong enough to gain actual control of the Diet and form its own government is not at present forseeable. Japan as a whole is still too distrustful of Labor and its policies to suffer such a development. Much of this distrust may be unjustified, but its existence cannot be ignored. Moreover, Labor does not at the moment have sufficient men of ministerial caliber within its ranks to be able to form a government, although there are a few Labor leaders of very superior qualities.

The Shakai Taishuto was the only group entering the recent general election with a clearly defined and constructive platform. Some few of its planks are too radical for acceptance in Japan today, but on the whole it offers no great cause for alarm, and it is quite probable that even Labor itself would not push for the enactment of all the measures it now advocates if it were certain of their success.

This platform, as adopted at the pre-election national convention in Tokyo in January, calls for the establishment of parliamentary government by the working classes, opposition to tax increases affecting the poorer classes; adoption of a national pension system; establishment of a loan fund for commerce and industry; nationalization of the most important industries; state compensation for losses in the agricultural industry; the actual independence of Manchukuo; a modification of Japan's China policy; opposition to Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations; support of a Russo-Japanese nonaggression treaty; international agreements for the peace and security of the Pacific region; abandonment of the self-sufficient, isolated economic bloc system; freedom of access to markets and raw materials, including free trade; economic consolidation of Manchukuo; co-operation with the "oppressed peoples" of Asia, and abolition of any naval building race.

Gas, Oil and Hollywood.

Moving pictures may soon be pumped into your home, regular or high test.

A corporation with heavy mining and oil interests has bought out Carl Laemmle, pioneer movie man and ace Hollywood producer.

• • • •

From now on when you enter a movie house and there is any inquiry regarding which pictures you would like to see, you can just reply, "Oh, just fill 'er up!"

• • • •

The gas station influence on the movies may even reach a point where the nickolet usher may ask the customer, "Do you need any water?"

• • • •

All we hope is that no Roxy type usher wipes off our spectacles with a greasy rag and asks, "How about a grease job?"

• • • •

Combining the gasoline and picture interests suggests many possibilities. It may be the dawn of an era where you can get advice on lubrication and ignition troubles at any cinema house and see a Mickey Mouse film with every five gallons of gas at a pumping station.

• • • •

The customer is apt to get pretty confused, too. He may complain to the movie house manager that there must have been water in that last picture because the plot skipped so much.

• • • •

Or complain at the gas station that the last ten gallons were awful and that he hopes next week's fuel will be more entertaining.

• • • •

We may even see the pumping stations advertising Mae West oil, Clark Gable gasoline and Popeye tires.

• • • •

When you ask a moving picture star what company he is with now he may answer: "I'm with Socony, but if I could break my contract I could get more money making pictures for Shell or Richfield."

3-Party Fight In Minnesota Worries G.O.P.

Farmer - Labor - Democrat Combination Threatens Republican Hopes.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, March 26.—A free-for-all fight is under way in Minnesota's political ring, with a possible Farmer - Labor - Democrat combination threatening Republican hopes of a Presidential comeback in the State.

Interparty strife among both Democrats and Farmer-Laborites, however, has endangered the edged claimed by Democratic leaders for President Roosevelt, and encouraged the G. O. P. to press its drive for three Presidential possibilities.

In 1932, the first time Minnesota ever returned a Democratic majority for President, Farmer-Laborites and Democrats combined to swing the Presidential vote to Roosevelt, while Farmer-Laborites were elected to the chief State offices.

Red Issue Splits Party.

Success in a reported move with the same objectives this year, however, was menaced by dissension in the Farmer-Labor ranks, split by some demands for purging the party of Communists and bickerings among three aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination.

While Roosevelt is the only standard bearer mentioned for the Democrats, Joseph Wolf, national committeeman contesting with another faction of the party for supremacy, contends a number of Roosevelt delegates named to the national convention by the opposing bloc would desert the President at the first chance. Wolf claims his opposition is composed of the remnants of the old Al Smith supporters.

Olson Faces Fight.

Gov. Floyd B. Olson, spearhead of the Farmer-Labor Party, may iron out differences in the third party ranks, but he faced a vigorous fight in campaigning for a seat in the United States Senate against Representative Theodore Christianson, Republican. Olson defeated Christianson in 1930.

Minnesota Republicans look toward Christianson to help formulate the agricultural plank in the party's national platform.

Indications are that Republican delegates will be uninstructed. State Senator Roy Crowley, heading the Landon drive, said his group was not seeking an instructed delegation but that the Knox people were. Knox leaders disavowed such an intention. The Borah drive has not yet gone under full steam.

House Extends FHA Repair Loans Year

By the Associated Press.

The House voted yesterday to extend for another year the Federal Housing Administration's authority to insure repair and modernization loans.

The House substituted its own bill for one passed by the Senate, but prompt Senate agreement was forecast. It would then go to the White House. Present authority to make modernization and repair loans expires April 1.

The principal difference in the House bill was a provision—put in at insistence of members from flood States—authorizing insurance up to $2,000 of loans for outright new construction. The act now limits the loans to improvements to homes already built.

The measure would reduce the Government insurance from 20 per cent to 10 per cent of the total volume of loans made by a bank. Representative Hancock (Democrat), North Carolina, who opposed the bill, sought unsuccessfully to cut it to 5 per cent.

Italy Is Prepared For 'War in Alps'

Rome, March 26 (AP).—An army report that the commands in the Alps are being maintained on a war basis and that Italy is ready even "for the unforeseen" was cheered today by the Senate.

Gen. Federico Baistrocchi, undersecretary of war, said the army of 1,250,000 men is prepared to "smash" any enemy attempt to gain a foothold in Italy, particularly in the Alps.

"Italy will not let circumstances take her by surprise, but will impose them upon her eventual adversaries," said the undersecretary.

The mechanized "cavalry" in the Alps, he said, furnishes "increased striking power" and, if war comes, Italy will adopt offensive tactics along Premier Mussolini's conception of "a war of mobility" rather than waging a defensive campaign.

Syrians to Ask Paris For Self Government

Paris, March 26 (AP).—Hopeful of achieving national independence, six Syrian delegates arrived today to negotiate a new treaty with France to replace the present mandate under which their country is governed.

France, which has found the League of Nations' mandate unprofitable and troublesome, has promised a new pact similar to the agreement given to Iraq by Great Britain.

The delegation expressed hope for an arrangement under which Syria would be given sovereignty, with the right to call on French governmental experts for aid, and would concede France the right to use strategic points for military purposes.

U. S. and Afghanistan Sign Treaty in Paris

Paris, March 26 (AP).—A treaty of commercial friendship and diplomatic and consular representation between the United States and Afghanistan was signed at the American Embassy today by Jesse I. Straus, American Ambassador in Paris, and Ali Mohamed Khan, Afghan minister to London.

3 Wage Fight For Republican Votes in South

Landon Pledge Sought in 2 States; Free Delegations for Borah, Knox.

Atlanta, March 26 (AP).—Vigorous campaigns for Southern delegates to the Cleveland National Republican Convention are being waged by followers of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Senator William E. Borah and Col. Frank Knox.

State Chairman Howard B. Shofner, of Tennessee, and William J. Howey, who twice unsuccessfully ran for Governor of Florida on the Republican ticket, are seeking instructed delegations for the Kansas Governor.

Supporters of the Idaho Senator and Chicago publisher apparently are behind moves for unpledged delegations.

Shofner, after a canvass of Tennessee Republicans, announced that the "rank and file" as well as "most of the leaders throughout the State believe Landon the logical man for the nomination."

Seeks Free Florida Group.

The North Carolina Republican Convention indorsed Federal Judge I. M. Meekins for the Presidential nomination, but suggested that the delegates confer with all candidates in picking the "best nominee."

Admirers of Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, would like to see the Virginia delegation vote for him as a "favorite son," but others want unpledged delegates. The State convention meets at Roanoke April 11.

The Louisiana delegation goes uninstructed. It is led by Attorney John E. Jackson, of New Orleans.

State Chairman Osro Cobb, of Arkansas, has announced he will insist on an uninstructed delegation at the convention in Little Rock May 2.

South Carolina Uninstructed.

South Carolina selected an uninstructed delegation. Dallas A. Gardner, State Republican chairman, said it will "act for the best interest of the party." Joseph W. Tolbert planned to carry a contesting delegation to Cleveland.

Shortly after the Georgia Republicans called their State convention for May 9 at Atlanta, a group of business men launched a campaign for Senator Borah. This was headed by Harry Commers, of Atlanta, who plans to seek a place on the delegation at large.

Friends of Landon and Knox are known also to be active in Georgia but there is a strong sentiment for an unpledged delegation.

Borah Drops Coast Race.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah decided yesterday not to enter the California Republican Presidential preference primary because it would be impossible for him to campaign in that State.

"My friends think I ought not to do so unless I can spend at least a week in California," he told reporters. "In view of the Illinois and Ohio situations—where I have already entered—that would be utterly impossible."

Borah, who spoke in Chicago last Saturday night in his contest with Col. Frank Knox, the publisher, for the Illinois delegation to the Cleveland convention, expects to return to that State next week. He spoke in Youngstown, Ohio, a week ago.

Death Sentences Given 2 Russian Plot Leaders

Moscow, March 26 (AP).—Two convicted leaders of an espionage and sabotage ring were sentenced to death today by a military supreme court at Krasnoyarsk.

They were charged with attempting to disrupt traffic on the trans-Siberian Railway connecting European Russia and Far-Eastern territory. Five other members of the gang were sentenced to prison. All were employes of the railway shops at Krasnoyarsk situated on the road 300 miles north of the border of Outer Mongolia.

Those sentenced to death were Joseph Braidak, and Konstantin Pichurin, both declared to have been in the pay of an unnamed "foreign intelligence service."

Sentence Commuted, Slayer Prefers Death

Oklahoma City, March 26 (AP).—Robert H. Denton, 22, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, wants to go back to death row "where I had privacy and where I felt better."

The slayer of John O. Peters, former Oklahoma City University athlete, today wrote the State pardon and parole officer:

"I am tired of life, of eating, sleeping, shaving, bathing, dressing, undressing and all the useless, senseless things necessary to life."

But officers said the request could not be granted.

Aid Bill Fight Mapped

ernment and operate their own works programs.

"Such a plan would put the responsibility where it belongs," Vandenberg said. "It would eliminate absentee management with all its ghastly injustices."

In effect, the plan would put the administration of relief back into the hands of State officials with financial assistance from the Federal Government. Such a plan, through elimination of costly Federal projects, might be expected to reduce the amount necessary to be spent by the Federal Government. Overhead costs probably would be at least no higher than at present, as administrative offices now are maintained in each State, in addition to the setup in Washington and in addition to regional offices.

Another line of attack on the Administration relief program is expected to take the form of a provision that none of the money appropriated may be used for a project which cannot be completed without additional appropriations.

Would Forestall Projects.

This move is intended to forestall such projects as the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy power development in Maine. Congress has refused to make additional appropriations for these projects on the ground that they were started without legislative authority.

Meanwhile, it was indicated that a relief bill will not be ready for presentation in the House for about three weeks. The Appropriations Committee has not begun consideration of the measure, and may not do so for several days. Only short hearings are expected, although a more extensive inquiry is almost certain when the bill reaches the Senate.

The Davis resolution asking for an inquiry into the activities of WPA still was resting in the Senate Committee on Audit and Control. It was referred to that committee after it had been favorably reported from the committee on expenditures in the executive departments.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, author of the investigation resolution, introduced a bill to establish a flood rehabilitation administration to make up to $50,000,000 in loans to corporations and individuals. Loans could be made by the Federal Land Banks, Home Owners Loan Corporation, Resettlement and Relief Administrations. Loans could be made both to private individuals and concerns and to municipal corporations. The first call would be for 10 years and the second for 20 years, with interest at not more than 4 per cent.

More Flood Funds.

Hopkins indicated that another $10,000,000 might be allotted by WPA for flood relief. A total of $43,000,000 already has been earmarked for that purpose.

The relief administrator modified his order cutting 700,000 persons from WPA rolls by July 1 to provide that reductions should not be made within flood areas. He said that persons who went on relief after November 1 and who have heretofore been barred from WPA jobs would be employed where their services are needed.

He pointed to Cumberland, Md., as one community in which there are not enough relief workers to take care of flood rehabilitation operations.

The Red Cross announced that the flood relief problem was growing, with 103,000 families in need of assistance. It announced that relief contributions had reached $2,531,171.

The National Resources Committee announced it would develop a long-range national water plan to control floods. The plan will be delivered to President Roosevelt before December 1.

Senator Walsh (Democrat) Massachusetts, said he had received a ruling from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that it could lend to industry or business for equipment, machinery, appliances and appurtenances. He pointed out that loans could be made by the RFC in flooded areas.

The Senate postponed action on the Overton bill authorizing flood control projects in the lower Mississippi Valley. The bill carries an authorization of $272,000,000, and probably will be taken up early next week.

Roosevelt's Yacht Steams Eastward

Miami, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Under a blazing tropical sun President Roosevelt cruised today to Ciacos Island.

This point is northeast of Great Inagua Island, where he was yesterday, and is farther to the east than he has been on any previous trip in this vicinity.

The President pulled away from Matthewtown today at 7 o'clock this morning aboard the U. S. S. Potomac and trailed by the destroyers Monaghan and Dale.

Mongol Planes Rout Japanese In New Battle

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 26.—Fighting that broke out Wednesday on the Soviet-Manchukuo border, spread today to the frontier of Outer Mongolia, where cannon and planes were brought into play in a series of clashes.

Soviet press advices said Japanese and Manchukuo forces were concentrating along the frontiers near Norin Lake, with the evident purpose of renewing their alleged attempt to capture a Mongolian frontier post from which they were forced back today.

At dawn, the Japanese and Manchukuoans were said to have occupied the border position after crossing the Howsingo River. They remained until afternoon, when they withdrew to Manchukuo territory after planes maneuvered over their position.

In the battle which preceded seizure of the post, it was stated that the Japanese used two cannon, and the Mongolians, outnumbered, were forced to retreat nearly 4½ miles to a ravine north of Norin Lake.

On Wednesday, Soviet accounts said, Japanese and Manchukuo soldiers crossed the frontier near Shaghas and opened fire on a Mongolian detachment which drove them back across the border after a lively engagement.

The encounters of the past two days followed upon a period of relative calm on the Outer Mongolian frontier. Negotiations had been going on recently between Mongolia and Manchukuo for the appointment of a mixed border commission to settle boundary disputes.

It was officially announced at Moscow a few weeks ago that, if the Japanese expected to occupy Mongolia, the Soviet government would go to Mongolia's assistance.

Divorce Is Sought From Artist-Wife

The beautiful artist-wife of William F. A. Herrmann, an officer of the Herrmann Ginger Ale Co., yesterday was charged with deserting her Washington husband, in a suit filed in the District Supreme Court.

The wife, Azadia N. Herrmann, a well-known artist, is living in New York.

The petition, which asked absolute divorce, was filed for Herrmann by Walter Bastian, president of the District Bar Association.

The couple was married in 1928 and the desertion is alleged to have occurred in 1934.

Mrs. Herrmann has made portrait painting her specialty. She is widely known in Washington social and art circles.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Good Neighbor Policy

New Yor, March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt expanded on her husband's "good-neighbor" policy today in an address before 1,700 high school girls, urging that the United States set an example of cooperation with Central and South American countries.

"We will have set an example which cannot help but be useful in a very troubled world," she said.

To insure peace "we've got to do a little work. We can't sit back and let the other fellow do it. We've got to study the histories of other countries and try to understand them. We've got to see that we send the right representatives to them and see that they know our wishes," the President's wife told the students.

She advised the girls to study history "realistically" and "not always believe your country is right."

Commissioners Deny 'Slighting' Of House Unit

Failure to Attend Hearing Brings Reprimand by Ellenbogen.

District Commissioners last night denied any intention of appearing discourteous to a sub-committee of the House District Committee after being reprimanded by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, for failure to attend a hearing on a bill providing for erection of a new recorder of deeds building.

The Commissioners were faced with the alternative of attending the House hearing or a special session of the Senate Appropriations Committee to report the $350,000 deficiency relief resolution.

When so informed, Ellenbogen told Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel, that his hearing was as important as that of the Senate committee.

"As long as I am chairman of this sub-committee," he said, "we are not going to hear any representative of the Commissioners. We want to hear the Commissioners in person."

William K. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, and his secretary, R. W. Horad, were heard, however, and they called attention to the present cramped quarters at 412 Fifth street. They opposed inclusion of their office in the proposed new courts building, for which $1,000,000 was appropriated by the House.

The bill authorizes the District Commissioners to borrow $300,000 from Federal relief sources to construct the building.

Health

President Roosevelt will not go back on the people of Washington and that the $3,000,000 eliminated from the Federal lump-sum appropriation will be restored.

She called Gallinger Hospital, where patients lie in corridors because ward space is inadequate, a "disgrace to the Nation's Capital," and predicted that the House will be more considerate of the health items in the supply bill if it gets another chance to vote on it.

Mrs. Norton urged the establishment of numerous tuberculosis clinics where ambulatory cases might be treated. To corect deficiences in the District's relations with the Federal Government, she recommended appointment of a District delegate to Congress. A bil to that effect was recently introduced by Mrs. Norton.

Reiterates Backing.

Senator Capper, ranking Republican on the Senate District Committee and its former chairman, reiterated his support of the civic crusade for adequate public health appropriations.

"I a mgoing to stand as strong as I can to restore the appropriation to the Budget Bureau's figures," he said.

Dr. Allen Freeman, professor and dean of public health administration ah Johns Hopkins University, said Washington must concentrate on control of two widely prevalent diseases, tuberculosis and syphilis.

Glass to Fight Talk by Blanton To Senate Unit

Says He Would Quit Floor if Request to Appear Is Granted.

A split in the Senate Appropriations Committee was threatened yesterday over the request of Representative Thomas L. Blanton for permission to address the District sub-committee for an hour.

The fiery chairman, 78-year-old Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, let it be known that he would oppose Blanton's appearance and would not be present to hear him if the sub-committee decided to give him the time.

Senator Glass was out of the city yesterday, but it was learned that he had expressed his views in no uncertain language to several members of the committee.

He is said to have characterized Blanton's request as "brazen effrontery" and an attempt to turn the committee's hearings into a debating society.

Granting of the Texan's request, he said, also would establish a bad precedent that would open the doors for all members of Congress and would retard the legislative machinery.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the District sub-committee, will put the matter before the group upon his return to Washington next Tuhrsday.

Writ to Test Jury Duty Ban On U. S. Aids

Lawyer to Ask Appeals Court to Prevent 4 From Facing Trial.

A writ of "prohibition" to test the legality of an indictment charging four men with conspiring to keep a witness from testifying before the House Military Affairs Committee will be filed in the United States Court of Appeals as an aftermath of the appellate court ruling Wednesday that the presence of Government employes on criminal court juries was "prejudicial" to the defendant.

William E. Leahy, who took a leading part in protesting against the District's new law legalizing the service of Government employes, announced yesterday he was planning to ask the Court of Appeals to issue the writ to prevent Joseph and Nathan Silverman, Brig. Gen. Alexander Williams and Thomas Jefferson Ryan from being tried in the District Supreme Court. They have entered pleas of not guilty.

The theory behind the suit, Leahy explained, was that, if Federal employes were not eligible for petit jury service, they could not lawfully sit on the grand jury. The writ is expected to clarify the opinion which held, merely, that Federal employes could not sit on criminal court juries, since the Government was a party to the case.

The grand jury, hastily adjourned after the opinion was made public, was re-assembled yesterday, but heard only jail cases. The latter, it was said, affected only those under arrest who were unable to provide bail.

Just how far the opinion will go is not yet known. Attorneys yesterday were considering whether it will make invalid all convictions since last August, or will affect only those in which there was exception taken to the service of Government employes. Some contend all the indictments of recent months were void, while others claim the ruling will affect only those in which appeals were noted.

Janitor Held in Theft From Storage Room

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 26. Harry Butts, janitor of a downtown building here, was arrested yesterday, charged with the theft of a quantity of clothing from the storage room of the J. C. Penney Co. store.

His arrest followed the recovery of five suits of clothing and three leather coats, which police declare he sold at various places in the county. They were identified by store employes.

Butts was remanded to jail to await a preliminary hearing.

This is what we tell them
in the privacy of our home

FREQUENTLY in our home in Kentucky, a guest to whom we have served Four Roses will ask us, "Why is Four Roses a blend?"

This is what we tell them:

There are three kinds of whiskey—straight whiskey which is unblended; whiskey that's blended with neutral spirits; and a blend of straight whiskies and nothing else but whiskey.

Our family has been making whiskey for four generations. We've made it by every proper method. And it is our sincere belief that the finest whiskey must be that third kind—a blend of straight American whiskies.

That's exactly what Four Roses is.

Several straight American whiskies—and nothing but these whiskies—go into Four Roses. While each is great by itself, each also has some particular virtue. One surpasses in its aroma, another in flavor, another in body, another in smoothness.

Then we blend these whiskies—with the knowledge of four generations guiding our hand—so as to combine in one superlative whiskey the virtues of several great whiskies.

That's why we believe you will like Four Roses—will decide that your whiskey search is ended, that Four Roses has come into your life to stay!

Capital Singer Called Second Sophie Tucker

Little Kitty Simons Wins Acclaim of Ambassador's Hi-Hat Crowd.

By Chanticleer.

Little Kitty Simons, who opened this week at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat, is a good example of "local girl makes good." She's strictly a Washington product—educated in the public schools and a graduate of the Clifford Brooke Academy. I've followed the course of her semi-professional work on the air and I'm not surprised that she's wowing the customers at the Hi-Hat this week.

Kitty's principal appeal, as I stand off and look on, is her ability to "sell" a song. She had some of the Hi-Hat's patrons talking of her as another Sophie Tucker her opening night. And it's a little hard to express that type of personality via a microphone. The supper club's floor is the spot.

The Sophie Tucker idea isn't entirely a figment of a fanciful imagination. Kitty sings with the Paradise Islanders at the Hi-Hat—and they worked with the "red-hot mama" of jazz at one time. They agree with it.

'Twon't be long now before the Powhatan Roof will be prepared for the annual Macias invasion.

The spring motif also is on Matt Windsor's program. Matt already is at work on the roof at No. 1 Thomas Circle. Last year the roof was idle, but Host Windsor feels that this summer is going to be just like old times in the dine-and-dance world, and so painters, carpenters and cleaners are hard at work renovating. Of course, on rainy nights, everything is merely moved down to the present supper room, where, this week, Consuelo Gonzales is being heard in her last Washington week.

Jimmie Byrd, manager of the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations, opines that so long as it's quality, things can be given away. On the recent occasion of the Mayfair's birthday celebration, Manager Byrd offered a free cocktail and dinner wines to all diners. Result: Forty cases of liquors consumed. Milbourne Christopher this week with his black magic, Jack Campbell, at the tableside piano.

The "Two Checkers" provide sweet music, while you sit at the table and rassle with checker problems, at the Lafayette Checker Board Room. That's the spot featuring the checker board on the reverse side of the menu—and you play as you drink.

Bert Nagle and company headlines the week's floor attraction at the Lotus. And this would include the very novel "Crazy Cat in Person," Theodore and Wright, Kay and Dean and the Samet Sisters. All new costumes and routines . . . Lorraine and Carlos hold forth this week at the Madrillon. A blend of Castilian and New England in dance routines. And keep your eye on the new desert items on Host Borras' menu these days.

Considerable festivity is in the offing for the Russian Troika tonight. The cast of "At Home Abroad" is expected after the evening performance. Y'see, they are old pals for Karavaeff . . . Brian Brown is at it again. Just like the first robin and the dogwood, Artist Brown is one of the surest harbingers. This time it's a new mermaid for the menus, advertisements and other tags designating Maryland Club Gardens. The mermaid is a part of the garden-and-terrace scenery at the Gardens. Only you see her in print—and never in life. Come to think of it, I might get Brian Brown to give us a photograph of the original model. For use on this page.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, March 25.

The number of movie boners received again proves to be a gauge of the business that the various flickers are doing, and, according to the mail, "The Country Doctor" is the box office champ of the month. Agnes Dodd writes: "The nurse is dressing one of the quints in a dress with a sash which she ties carefully. She puts the child on the floor, and presto, all five are on the floor and all dressed alike in dresses gathered into a little yoke. What became of the sash dress from the table to the floor?"

In "The Country Doctor," declares Bernard Herz, during the barroom sequence, the piano player was playing the song, "I'm Shooting High," which is only a few months old. This scene, however, is supposed to have taken place before the quints were born. Mr. Herz says that he believes the piano player knew what songs were going to be published.

• • • •

But to get on to other pictures. More about the quints' flicker in future movie boner columns. Robert Donat in "The Ghost Goes West," is in the old castle in Scotland in which every one takes a candle to light their way to the bedrooms. However, claims Edith Bradley, when Donat hears a noise, he reaches for a button on an electric lamp and turns it on.

Concerning the flicker "Wife vs. Secretary," Don Bestor writes: "When Gable is at his office in New York, his secretary, Jean Harlow, calls Oyster Bay on a pay station. She asks Gable for 20 cents. I happen to know that such a call costs 30 cents. Was the telephone company having a sale that day?"

• • • •

Margaret Sullavan is saying good-by to her husband in the flicker, "Next Time We Love," and Ray Milland is seen looking at them. Near Milland, says James Badia, there is a life preserver which has the word, Roma, printed on it. This declares the name of the ship. In a later sequence, however, the managing editor of the paper sends a cablegram to Miss Sullavan's husband. The cable is addressed to the S. S. Savoia, but he receives it, regardless.

"In a 'Tale of Two Cities,'" writes Thomas Purdie, "a guy is shoeing a horse. His studio is under a stairway and the walls are draped with horse shoes. They are twentieth-century machine-made horse shoes. The picture is vintage eighteenth century. I'd have forged enough hand-made horse shoes to cover the walls for them" . . . Which proves that the movie fans spot the boners in their particular line of endeavor.

• • • •

Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times," comes back into the shack after the swim, and is hit by a beam which falls when he closes the door. In an earlier sequence the same thing happened, claims Stanley Levy, but Paulette Goddard fastens the beam back. Now the beam is not put back into place, but in the next flash, showing Chaplin leaving the hut, the beam is back in place. Another Chaplin talent.

In "Whipsaw," says Vincent Reiser, there is a sequence in which Spencer Tracy is seen talking with Myrna Loy, and full-length shots show Tracy with a button-down collar, fastened. Closeups of Tracy show both buttoned-down points of collar unfastened. Anyway, Spencer Tracy has one fan who watches him too closely.

• • • •

"During the 'Let's Face the Music and Dance' number in 'Follow the Fleet,'" declares Arthur Kwitten, "Fred Astaire walks on the dance floor alone, smoking a cigarette. He puffs on the cigarette several times, then lets it drop to the floor, and crushes it with his foot. Several minutes later, while dancing with Ginger Rogers on the same floor, the cigarette has disappeared and the floor is spotless. I wish I could fix it that way in my house."

Donald Woods in the flicker, "Road Gang," receives a telegram delivered by a Western Union messenger. The telegram, insists James Wallace, was written on a Postal Telegraph blank, and delivered in a Postal envelope.

• • • •

In "These Three," writes Dorothy Holt, when Alma Kruger, playing the role of Mrs. Amelia Tilford, goes to the small table to make a phone call, there is only the telephone on the table. Yet, just before this, it was very evident that there was a bowl of flowers on the table next to the phone.

$350,000 D. C. Aid Bill Ready For Signature

Senate and House Rush Emergency Measure to White House.

The $350,000 deficiency appropriation for emergency relief in the District was ready to be sent to the White House for the President's signature late yesterday after passing the Senate and being accepted with a technical amendment by the House.

District welfare officials meanwhile discussed how the extra $100,000 added by the House Appropriations Committee will be spent.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said that preferred consideration will be given to employables with dependent children. After a conference with M. Alice Hill, relief administrator, he stated it was estimated that 1,000 employable cases or a little more than a fifth of those now receiving aid, can be cared for with the $100,000.

Street pointed out that employables with dependent children are in greater need than others and that they become eligible for Federal aid only if they receive local relief.

It was stated that 1,336 cases had been certified for Federal aid to dependent children by the Board of Public Welfare as eligible in February and March.

Senate action on the deficiency resolution came, as in the House, without debate after Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, had explained the need for prompt action.

Groom Sees Bride First Time, Wed

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—The bridegroom saw the bride for the first time in his life and said "Hello." Then he kissed her and two minutes later they were man and wife.

The marriage took place at the municipal airport today, ending a long-distance courtship begun and finished by air mail. The principals were Mrs. Mildred Olson, 41, a widow from Pasadena, Calif., and John S. Ericson, 45, of Chicago.

"She saw my picture in a magazine three months ago," Ericson related, "and wrote that she'd like to become pen pals with me. We carried on a correspondence for about three months."

He proposed by mail and she accepted by return post. Today she came to Chicago by plane. They were married by his uncle, the Rev. Albin Johnson.

Hollywood Producer To Move to Florida

Hollywood, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Last year's threat of the movie industry to move from Hollywood to Florida because of taxes echoed today in the announcement by M. M. Hoffman, jr., independent producer, that he would construct a new studio at Brandon Park, North Miami, Fla.

It will be known as the Pan-American Studios, Inc., Hoffmann said, and will begin producing pictures "around June 1."

Tribute Paid King Fuad I At Reception

His Majesty's Birthday Marked at Egyptian Legation Fete.

Record Number Attends; Minister Receives at Top of Stairway.

By Dudley Harmon.

The Minister of Egypt, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, and his guests from Washington's official and diplomatic society, yesterday celebrated the birthday anniversary of King Fuad I, Egyptian monarch, with a reception at the legation.

The reception is an annual event and this year brought a record number of guests. The Minister received at the top of the legation's curving stairway, and the line of guests reached down the steps and almost into the street.

Guests gathered around the punchbowl and the tea pot at opposite ends of the dining room, sampled unfamiliar Egyptian delicacies, assembled in the spacious upstairs drawing rooms or went to the balcony overlooking Sheridan Circle.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, was one of the first to arrive and among the last to go. The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, stayed a shorter time. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who recently returned from a trip South, was there wearing a short cape of black sealskin and a round sailor hat with an upturned brim. She was accompanied by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. The Cabinet also was represented by the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper.

Diplomats predominated in yesterday's gathering. The Minister of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera were present, as were the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri. Others there were the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Senor Dr. Jose Baron, the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemecek; Mme. Perazic, Russian wife of the Secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation; the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis of Sant' Orsola and the First Secretary of the Embassy, Signor Bartolomeo Migone.

Others there were Mrs. William Borah, Senator Arthur Capper, Representative Frank Buck and Representative Clarence Lea, of California; Mrs. Benton McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Louis Schapiro, Mr. Mannix Walker, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Cabot Stevens and Mrs. Russell Bennett, with her daughter, Miss Florence Harris.

Capital Society Attends Concert

Dr. Hans Kindler Conducts at Last of Season's Thursday Series.

By Francesca McKenney.

Members of Capital society yesterday afternoon attended the last of the National Symphony Orchestra's Thursday concerts of the season. Dr. Hans Kindler conducted. Dr. Kindler built the program around musical works for which he has had special requests. Among them was Schubert's immortal "Unfinished" Symphony and Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik." Other works included in the program were by Bach, Albeniz, Satie-Debussy and Weinberger.

Although the concert yesterday was the last of the Thursday afternoon series, there will be one more Sunday concert on April 5, which will bring the season to a close, when Dr. Kindler will present his annual "request" program.

Among those who attended the concert were the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, who wore an ensemble of navy blue with a hat to match; Mrs. William W. Galbraith, who was accompanied by Mrs. Reeve Lewis and Mrs. Buchanan Merryman. Mrs. Galbraith wore a gown of black crepe with a black straw hat trimmed with a white flower. Mrs. Merryman wore black with a white jabot, as did Mrs. Lewis, who wore a touch of bright red on her black hat.

Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, Mrs. Tracy Dows and Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton were all gowned in smart ensembles of black which seemed to be the choice of the many members of society who attended the concert. Many of the smart black frocks and straw hats were relieved with a touch of color from a gardenia or a bunch of bright-colored field flowers.

Miss Olivia Stokes and Miss Christine Ekengren were both attired in smart natural-colored tweed suits with felt hats of saddle brown and accessories to match. Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman wore a gown of wine-colored crepe with a black hat and accessories to match. Mrs. Edwin C. Watson, better known in musical circles as Frances Nash, was in a box with friends.

Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, of New York, who is at present making her home in the Capital, was chatting with friends in the foyer during the intermission. Mrs. Smithers wore an ensemble of black and white with one of the new extreme shaped black straw hats trimmed with white. Mr. Alexander Liggett also was at the concert as was Mrs. Charles Acker, who wore a gown of black trimmed with touches of red.

Recital Tomorrow.

The Instituto de las Espanas has arranged a special concert and recital of Spanish and Pan-American songs to be given by the Cuban soprano, Lydia de Rivera, tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel.

Wedding Takes Place at Wild Acres

Harris & Ewing.

Lieut. and Mrs. Walter Myers and Mrs. Myers' parents, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. Lieut. and Mrs. Myers will make their home at the Kennedy-Warren upon their return from a two weeks' motor trip.

Covilles to Sail To Britain Soon On Way to East

Myers-Grosvenor Nuptials Advanced Because of Departure Plans.

The approaching departure of her sister, Mrs. Cabot Coville, for Europe was responsible for Miss Carol Grosvenor's decision to advance the date of her wedding to Dr. Walter Kendall Myers from May, the month set when her engagement was announced a few weeks ago, to Tuesday of this week. Mrs. Coville, whose husband, the Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Tokyo, has been on duty in the Far Eastern division of the State Department, on a temporary assignment, was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant.

Mr. and Mrs. Coville will leave soon for England, where they will remain for a month before continuing their journey to Japan. The exact date of their leaving is indefinite.

They came to Washington last October, accompanied by Mrs. Coville's sister, who had spent the summer with them in Tokyo.

The marriage of Miss Grosvenor, whose full name is Elsie Alexandra Carol Grosvenor, took place at Wild Acres, near Bethesda, the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, with the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, D. D., officiating. Her sister was her matron of honor and Mr. McNaughton Myers served as best man for his brother.

The only persons present at the ceremony were the parents of the bride, her brothers and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville, Dr. Mabel Grosvenor, Mrs. Gertrude Grosvenor Blair, Miss Gloria Grosvenor and Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor's grandchildren and the immediate family of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Martin Myers, of Mercersburg, Pa.; Dr. Myers' father and mother; Mr. and Mrs. McNaughton Myers, his brother and sister-in-law; Mr. Jacob Martin Myers, jr., another brother, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Theodore Daub, a brother-in-law and sister.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown and lace which had belonged to her grandmother, the late Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell. Her traveling costume was a grey suit with a summer fur cape, and small blue hat with a blue veil and shoes and gloves to match.

Dr. and Mrs. Myers are now on a two weeks' motor trip and on their return will be at home, after May 1, at the Kennedy-Warren, where they have taken an apartment.

MR. AND MRS. HOWARD IRISH, leaving the Church of the Covenant after their wedding yesterday. Mrs. Irish is the former Mrs. George Herbert Harries, the widow of Gen. Harries, of Washington.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

President Roosevelt won first place among the members of his family and the staff of the White House engaged in a friendly contest to discover the first crocus of spring in the grounds of the Executive Mansion. Every morning the President watched for the first floral harbinger of spring. He was rewarded just before he left on his fishing trip by finding a lovely yellow one growing near the Presidential walk outside the executive offices. Now the White House Grounds are spring-like with a multitude of yellow, white and rose-hued crocuses.

Another bit of news for frequenters of the White House is that the temperamental Hannibal clock on the mantel of the green room is going again. This clock, purchased by President Monroe, and of value as a relic of his Administration and as an example of the clockmaker's art of that day, sometimes rebels against the march of time and events and stubbornly remains at the same hour day in and day out. On one occasion a visitor due for an appointment at 11 a. m., nearly had heart failure when the old clock's hands were seen to point sternly at 11:15 a. m. But they had been pointed that way for weeks and she was on time, after all.

A merry group of bridge players forgot official and Congressional cares at the attractive home of Representative and Mrs. John W. Boehme, jr., of Indiana, in Garfield street last night. Before the games, a buffet supper was served from a table decorated with spring flowers. Among the guests were the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Charles West, Representative and Mrs. Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio; Representative and Mrs. Byron B. Harlan, Ohio, Representative and Mrs. Gardner R. Withrow, Wisconsin; Representative and Mrs. Gerald J. Boileau, Wisconsin; Representative and Mrs. Frank C. Kniffin, Ohio.

Representative Boehme is of the second generation of Congressional service, his father, the late John W. Boehme, of Indiana, having served in the House also. The present Representative fell in love with and married a Washington bell, Miss Selma O. Heitmuller. They have two sons, John William Boehme, 17, and Charles H. Boehme, 10.

Speaking of bridge players, a brand-new recruit to the game arrived in town on March 24, James H. Lemon, jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, leaders in the bridge set of Washington, who have carried off trophy after trophy in interstate matches. Mrs. Lemon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William N. McGehee have joined the grandparents club with joy. Mr. McGehee, former Interstate Commerce Commissioner and now general counsel of the Southern Railway, is a prominent member of the Dixie Colony in Washington.

Skeptical About the Circus

Harris & Ewing.

MME. OTTO WADSTED,

wife of the Minister of Denmark, and their small son, Otto, and his nurse, snapped at the circus being given at the Shoreham for the benefit of the Children's Hospital. Little Otto did not appreciate an offer to let him ride one of the elephants after the show but enjoyed seeing them in the ring.

Circus Animals Fascinate Hotel Residents Here

Residents at the Shoreham are enjoying a perpetual circus this week. Tulsa and Judie, the two elephants appearing with Hamid's Circus there, are living in the Shoreham garage, and each morning are put through their paces on the terrace outside. As they lumber onto the stone flags, windows all over the building fly up, heads pop out, and residents lean their elbows on the sills and watch, fascinated.

A guest at the Shoreham was an hour late for a luncheon engagement the other day. Asked where she had been, she replied:

Even Gulliver Scenes Found In New Drapes

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THOSE SEEMINGLY insurmountable problems of slip covers and upholstery vanish on the wings of the wind when you step foot inside a certain little shop we know about. Here are rolls and rolls and yards and yards of the most irresistible fabrics. And at prices that conform to the most modest budget. For instance, the glazed chintzes. Here's one with a background of pale hunter's green, and printed on it as though painted there are field and hunting scenes. What more appropriate for a man's room? Or a den?

The same chintz comes also with ivory, tan, green and blue backgrounds. And here's one that has the feather design. Sprinkled against almost any colored background you could wish are prints of feathers magnified a hundredfold to give the effect of prehistoric ferns. And then there's a black and white floral chintz that leaves you wide-eyed with admiration. (This, too, in colors!) And what's this? A regal chintz, in the Prince of Wales pattern.

It's an actual fact that many of these imported chintzes once sold wholesale for as much as $1.75 a yard. And now, mind you, they range from 25 cents to 40 cents.

If you can tear yourself away from these beauties you must look at the satin and empire damasks from Italy. They're breath-taking. And so reasonable.

And—if you have time—do see the hand-blocked linens from England. In floral prints and plaids. Fifty inches wide they are, and only 90 cents a yard.

Just a second—here are some flowered voiles that make perfect curtains for the old Georgetown home.

Confection Celebrated by Early Bards and Poets Now Finds Wide Use by Moderns as a Substitute for Sugar.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

HONEY as a food has a long and honorable history. It is mentioned again and again in the Old Testament, it was a favorite dish with the nations of antiquity and its virtues have been extolled by poets.

Nowadays its uses have become more numerous and many have come to use it in the same capacity as sugar.

The home maker eager to bring variety into her menus, particularly in the matter of desserts, can obtain many novel results through the use of honey.

Here are a few honey recipes which may assist the homemaker to utilize honey more in her menus than heretofore. Take for instance, thisone for honey cups.

Honey Cups.

2 cups thin cream
6 egg yolks, well beaten
2 tablespoons grated walnuts
¼ cup honey
Pinch of salt

To scalded cream add egg yolks, stirring constantly. Add honey and salt and cook in double boiler until very smooth. Strain through cheesecloth. Pour into baking dish and chill. Sprinkle top with grated walnuts.

The cookie jar will be popular with the entire family if it has in it a goodly supply of:

Honey Drop Cookies.

¾ cup honey
¼ cup shortening
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon cloves
2 tablespoons water
1 egg
1½ to 2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
1 cup raisins, cut fine

Warm the honey and shortening until melted. While the mixture is warm add the spices. When cold add the water, the beaten egg, and 1½ cups of flour sifted with the baking powder and soda. Finally stir in the raisins. Sufficient flour must be added to make a dough stiff enough to drop from a spoon. Bake in moderately hot oven.

Walnut Honey Creams.

1 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons extracted honey or tablespoons strained honey
4 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup walnut meats

Chop the nut meats very fine. Measure the sugar, honey and water into a saucepan and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Let it boil rapidly for about one minute.

Try a little in cold water. If a soft ball forms remove the candy from the stove at once. The candy thermometer if used will register 238 degrees F. at this point. Add the chopped nut meats and the salt. Beat about five minutes or until the candy begins to grain. Pour quickly on a greased platter. When cool enough cut into inch squares.

Wash your hands, grease them with a little butter and mold each between the palms of your hands. Place in rows on a buttered platter or tin.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Food Value of Nuts.

ALL forms of animal and plant life attempt to perpetuate themselves. As an important link in this process most plants produce seeds, each of which contains a germ capable of growth. Under favorable conditions seeds will sprout and new plants will appear.

Neither animals nor plants can grow unless they are provided with nourishment, and seeds will not germinate unless sufficient food surrounds the embryo. The new bit of plant life cannot gather food on its own account until leaves and roots develop. Hence, it is necessary to supply nutriment until these structures can begin to function.

Thus we see that the provision plants make for their children creates a food supply for man. We use the seeds of wheat, corn, barley, oats, rye, beans, peas, etc., for their stored-up food.

Seeds may be quite large or very tiny and differ considerably in the amount and character of food which they contain. Some will consist largely of starch, others of starch and protein, and still others of starch, protein and fats (oils). Practically all have small amounts of minerals. Nuts, particularly, are rich in fats.

Nut Values Cited.

Because of their high nutritive qualities, nuts have come to be an important article of diet, and the annual yield in this country amounts to more than 1,500,000,000 pounds. The yearly per capita consumption of peanuts alone in the United States exceeds 7 pounds. Peanuts are not "nuts" in the strict sense of the word. They are really a rich, oily bean and are formed by ground growing plants. The commonly used roasting process renders them palatable. A popular product is peanut butter.

To some persons nuts are relatively indigestible. Well-roasted peanuts are less so than many other types as experiments have shown that peanut butter and peanut flour can be digested about as readily as other forms of food rich in protein and fat. It is a common experience, however, to be unable to digest nuts or nut products easily. They may be tasted for hours or even days after a nut-eating orgy, which generally means that the stomach has not thoroughly emptied itself.

Difficulties with digestion lie in the fact that the nuts may not be thoroughly masticated. Furthermore, they are rarely eaten in connection with other foods—vegetables, etc.—and decrease, therefore, the power of the stomach to discharge its contents into the intestine. They are so rich in oil that some interference with fat digestion may occur.

High Calory Values.

Those who are unusually fond of nuts—and there are many—may pile up within the body more calories than are needed. For example, a dozen peanuts will equal 100 calories. To one who would confine his diet to this type of food, except as a matter of dire necessity, would disorganize his digestive system rather quickly. There would be too great a preponderance of fats in relation to carbohydrates and minerals. In fact, many nuts contain 60 per cent or more of fat; walnuts, 64 per cent; hickory nuts, 67 per cent; Brazil nuts, 66 per cent; pecans, 70 per cent, and even the lowly goober (peanut), nearly 40 per cent.

An Air-Minded Dinner Gown

ONE CERTAIN way to an aviator's heart—or to that of almost any other man—would be to wear the 1936 dinner gown pictured above. Lacquered white airplanes printed on black silk taffeta make this costume so striking that there is no danger of its wearer's ever becoming an Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire. The winged effect at the top of the sleeve further carries out the air motif. The short jacket and the very feminine lace frill reflect spring style influences. The costume is worn with abbreviated silk taffeta gloves.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Man's Love for Woman Who Remains Utterly Indifferent To His Attentions Scarcely Justifies His Probing Into Her Background to Discover Key to Her Attitude.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in a quandary. I am in love with a young woman. Both of us are in our thirties. We have known each other over a year, but I seem to be making no progress. We see each other now and then, never making any engagements ahead from one time to the next. When I telephone her she always makes me wait two weeks or so. In other words, I am used for a fill-in. At the time of our first meeting she told me she had no mother, and her remark struck me as rather odd. Intuition led me to investigate what lay back of that remark and back of her strange indifference to me. I learned that her mother is alive and confined to a sanitarium for the feeble-minded, with no hope of being cured.

Mary Haworth

* * * *

I have been told the young lady has confided in a friend that she will never marry and wants no men friends with matrimonial intent. Her fear is that if she should marry and have children she might end in an institution, as her mother has. I love her so much I would marry her regardless of her background, and with the understanding we would have no children except by adoption. But she is so cold and indifferent to me. I believe her mother's condition is due to physical causes and might have been averted if the circumstances of her life had been different. In spite of this woman's attitude and what I have learned of her background and in spite of the pleadings of my friends, I find it impossible to stop loving her.

* * * *

Please advise me what to do in this situation. I do not want her to know I have found out about her mother, after her odd statement that she has no mother. I have visited her mother and feel the mother could be treated if given an opportunity. I asked her certain questions and she responded in an intelligent manner. Very truly yours, J. J.

Woman Morally Entitled to Rest on Own Decision.

DEAR J. J.: Under the circumstances I believe it would be entirely out of order for you to attempt to impose your way of thinking upon the young woman, no matter how tenderly protective and nobly unselfseeking you may think your motives are. It seems to me she is morally entitled to rest on her own decision in a matter which so vitally affects her own life. Since she has shown no partiality for your company, much less indicated any spark of serious interest in you, I believe you haven't a leg to stand on in attempting to change the course of the way of life she has decreed for herself.

* * * *

If your love for her was any less gentle and unselfish than it seems to be, I would be tempted to say your investigation of her background amounts to indelicate and almost unforgivable prying. I would have said—had you asked my opinion about the wisdom of such investigation before launching it—that you were not entitled to gaze, however pityingly and understandingly, upon skeletons in the closet of her private life unless she herself had given you the key. If you had proposed marriage to her and she had told you she loved you but could not marry any man because of an unmentionable dark heritage which was hers, then one might have found more to admire in the dauntless quality of your suit, which insists on knowing, courageously accepting and generously dealing with the painful truth. As things stand, however, you are in no more advantageous position to further your suit than you were before. Since she has given you no reason to hope, she has given you even less reason to presume. And a high degree of presumption would be required to tell her that you have learned the truth about her mother and are still determined to marry her.

* * * *

Perhaps she has guessed you would marry her if you could. And it may be she hasn't the slightest emotional interest in you and wishes to forestall any proposal of marriage. Then, too, there is a possibility her mother's condition may be the result of a subconscious revolt against such adult responsibilities as are entailed by heterosexual love. And it may be the daughter in turn subconsciously feels herself to be similarly inadequate to mature responsibilities; or she may be revolting against the sexual side of life and be making her mother's plight a dramatic and plausible excuse for shirking wifehood and motherhood. Or a blood taint may exist, of the kind which spawns mental and physical cripples in alternate generations. Whatever her mental and physchic reservations concerning marriage, you have probably only scratched the surface of their true nature in learning that her mother still lives in an institution for the feebleminded. Until she shows a real desire to confide her secret, you have no right to trespass further on her privacy, and no reason to believe your suit will be successful.

* * * *

I believe the soundest advice I can give you is to forget her and console yourself by taking someone else to wife. If you refuse to accept that advice, there is but one alternative. You will have to hover faithfully on the sidelines of her life, demonstrating the unselfish quality of your devotion in all possible ways and trusting to time and your own initiative to win her love, a full confession of her secret and her eventual trust in the wisdom of your way of solving her problem. M. H.

Miss Lillie Stresses Value of Wit

Comedienne Says Humor Always Will Outwit Other Woman.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WIT WILL OUTWIT "the other woman" every time.

So long as a wife can make her husband laugh loud, long and often, she can be fairly sure philandering isn't part of his scheme of things; that his lodge or board meeting—no matter how frequent—is merely that and nothing more.

So thinks Beatrice Lillie, who has only one husband (Sir Robert Peel) to judge from, but who probably knows as much about being amusing as any woman on the stage today.

Yet keeping your husband's tickle box tilted is sometimes easier said than done, she admitted yesterday in her dressing room at the theater.

A good deal depends on whether your sense of humor is the same type as his," she declared.

"Another important thing is to know whether your husband prefers to laugh at his own jokes or yours. If he's willing to go half and half, that's fine. But if he prefers to leave the stage entirely to you, your task is more difficult.

Kind of a Gift.

"Whether you go in for wisecracking, mimicry, satire, facetious innuendo, puns—or all of these—you must be spontaneous; and, what is more important, you must be sensitive to your response. Better not try to be funny at all than to miss fire."

In this connection she stressed the point no woman (or man, for that matter) can be amusing by working at it. "It's a kind of gift—and a gift that includes knowing how to gauge your audience, whether the latter happens to fill a theater or the chair across the breakfast table from you," she said.

BEATRICE LILLIE, noted comedienne, believes, "As long as a wife can amuse her husband, she needn't worry about losing him to 'the other woman.'" But, she adds, the job of being funny is not so easy as it seems.

Star, However, Advises That Husband's Likes Must Be Studied.

Miss Lillie believes, incidentally, the breakfast hour is the danger hour between husbands and wives and no time for wisecracks on the part of either. Furthermore, she offered a suggestion or two about staving off those morning tiffs that so frequently send the husband to his office in a black mood and leave the wife weeping at home.

She feels if the husband is the type of man who glowers over his cup of coffee and unsociably buries himself behind his morning newspaper, the wife had better emulate a mouse's quietness or let the man of the house eat alone.

She is convinced, also, the wise wife does better not to come to breakfast at all than to appear in an unbecoming wrapper and curl papers. The conrast between a frowsy wife at breakfast and a fresh-as-a-peach-bloom secretary an hour later adds nothing to marital well being, she said.

Humor Important.

Resuming her discussion of the value of evoking frequent laughter from one's husband, Miss Lillie further emphasized, "keeping him in a good humor is just as important as keeping him well fed. Sometimes, of course, the former results from the latter, but not always. Perhaps the next best thing to making your husband laugh and laughing with him is to be pleasant and as attractive as possible."

As to whether a truly amusing woman also can be a glamorous individual, Miss Lillie didn't say. "But what difference does that make?" she asked. "From what I have observed wit is a better marriage preserver than glamor anyway."

She declined to comment on what could be done about the husband whose funny bone is undeveloped, or missing entirely. "I really don't know," she said, thoughtfully. "My own husband, you see, has a very good sense of humor—thank goodness."

Before Donning New Gray Outfit, Check on Makeup

Whether or not you choose gray for your spring costume, the whole effect of your make-up, she advises, should be soft—natural skin tone, lips pleasantly red but not boldly so, cheeks flushing faintly or completely unrouged, eyes, as they were intended to be—the most dramatic feature of your face.

Harmony of cosmetic and costume colors is very important. The most conservative lip red will seem conspicuous if it quarrels with your scarf or your skin tone. Incidentally, woman who ordinarily can not wear gray becomingly find that a lively shade of powder helps considerably. Rachels with a faintly blushing tinge and rosy, sunny shades used with rosy lipstick and violet eye shadow are most becoming.

Speaking Platform Training Rules Told

Here are some ways to train for the speaking platform, as told wives of the Democratic legislators at the Democratic Club and reported by Associated Press.

To relax the voice—hum through the nose.

To banish stage fright—yawn generously.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"YOU ARE VERY young and foolish. When you are older you will look at it differently. You are too young and inexperienced to know what you mean."

There is nothing more maddening to the half-grown child than such statements. They block argument, stifle discussion, and leave the child with a helpless sense of inferiority. Youth is not a crime, but from the way some parents throw it up to their children, one might think it was.

Children are bound to have opinions on a number of things which they are not yet old enough to understand fully. Older people can but discuss with them along rational lines, giving them valid arguments gained from experience. If the child trusts his elders, he will probably accept their point of view at least in part, and may even follow their advice, knowing that it is based on sound reasoning.

The minute, however, that the adult tries to make his point by a reference to youth and age, the child's resentment is aroused, and he is very apt to go contrary to his parent's advice or opinions simply to declare his freedom. There is something exasperating about the words, "When you are as old as I am," which is felt by every child. Its very truth, its finality, emphasize his helplessness.

School Terms Longer Says Education Group

Both in America and abroad, young people now remain in school longer than they ever have, according to the Journal of the National Education Association. In the United States among the young people of high school age, seven out of ten are in school. High school enrollment has jumped from 1,000,000 to 7,000,000 in the last 28 years.

Chapter XXXIII.

"You're a Prisoner."

HE SHRUGGED his round shoulders, threw up both hands, dropped them and sighed. "My wife—my only wife."

"Your wife!" gasped Josephine. "That child—that baby!"

"You think too small, eh?"

Something in his expression rather than in the words themselves shocked her so profoundly that she shrank as if from a physical blow. Her body twisted away as though intent on escaping at least from the sight of Ibn. She threw herself face down on the cushions and no sooner had her head come to rest than she fell asleep with the suddenness of a stone dropping into water. With a sigh of relief Ibn also disposed himself for slumber, but the girl in the corner still kept vigil as if her eyes had forgotten how to close. Darkness fell, the cries of the drivers ceased, but the oxen kept on.

There is no sound quite like the sound of a rifle bullet that finds no mark; it sings a long, shrill song, venomous with disappointment. Josephine found herself half-erect, her head splitting with the pain of too sudden awakening. From far down the back trail came a puff of white, then a report and again the wasp-like screech of an arching bullet, high overhead.

Josephine Fights Back.

Ibn was already on his feet. In the moonlight which flooded the rear of the canopy she could see his face. It wore a bewildered blubbery look as if its fat were turning rancid. Suddenly he went into action with an alacrity amazing in one of his bulk. He snatched off the top of a great ngula basket, seized Josephine by the throat and simultaneously started to choke and to thrust her head-foremost into the ample receptacle.

In tackling an exceedingly healthy young English girl he was guilty of a gross miscalculation. Quite easily she rose to her feet. Dropping her head sharply to the right she sank her teeth into his wrist and bit with all her might. What was it she had planned to do? She remembered. Raising the heel of her boot almost knee high, she raked the flesh from one of his spindling shin bones and then from the other.

Now it was she who had miscalculated. The excruciating agony overstepping the limits of bearable pain, endowed its victim with maniacal strength. His thumbs dug into her windpipe and he shook her flaccid body back and forth as if it were a rat. She was conscious of a burst of light like a thousand stars followed instantly by utter darkness—a bottomless pit of darkness into which she plunged headlong.

When next she awoke she was convinced she had merely passed from a nightmare into a dream. Apparently the days that intervened since the departure from Wemba had been wiped off the slate. Was this Wemba? No, the trees were different. But it was Ballard who was holding her head in the crook of his arm, bathing her temples and her bruised throat. A blanket lay over her and somebody was busy at her feet.

Under slanted eyelids she watched Abdul unlatch her boots, slip them off and then start to tug at her jodhpurs. Ballard placed his right hand under the small of her back and lifted; Abdul gripped the ground with his bare toes and pulled. The tight calves of the breeches dragged slowly over her heels but immediately that obstruction was passed resistance ceased so suddenly that the boy went rolling over backward. She felt a tremendous alleviation, a blessed release of her whole body, and now laughter rippled through her in a warm flood.

"Oh, oh!" she gasped, "oh, oh!"

"You musn't," murmured Ballard. "Stop that. You're too weak to laugh."

She rolled her head from side to side in faint denial. "No, no; I—I want to laugh. Where are we?"

"Near a place called Mutambe. You're lying on my bed that I had made into a litter like Smith-Brandon's."

Learns Eric's Fate.

"Smith-Brandon?" she repeated with a frown. "Oh, of course; I remember now. Well, what happened to Eric after I left?"

"He's dead—dead and buried."

"So you killed him after all."

"I didn't. I knew I wouldn't have to from the minute I laid eyes on him. He was a goner with blackwater fever."

"What did he tell you?"

"Nothing. After he called out to you, he never spoke."

"Then how did you find out his name?" she asked quickly.

"There was a paper in his wallet promising him 10,000 pounds for proof of Morland's death."

"Twice as much as you," she murmured.

He frowned. Was she reminding him deliberately of the night he had said good-by to her forever? What he knew now about what she must have known then made that talk while they shared one pillow seem doubly strange. In spite of the revelation which had seemed to clear up every puzzle, mystery clung to her still. A suspicion stirred within him and he decided to put it to the test.

"Jo," he asked, "Will you do something for me?"

"Yes. What is it?"

"I've kissed you a lot; I want you to kiss me—just once."

"All right. When?"

"Now."

She looked straight into his eyes, but he did not lower his head so she slipped her arms around his neck and drew him down. For an instant their lips met lightly, but abruptly her arms tightened and lifted her toward him.

"Did you mind doing that?" he asked.

"No," she answered, her eyes buried in his. "I loved it."

"Then you lied in your throat when you told me—" He broke off, his eyes suddenly wide. "Is Laurence Morland your brother?" he asked. "Is that it?"

For an instant she hesitated, torn between pity for Ballard and allegiance to the fixed purpose of her entire pilgrimage. So long had she stuck to her one gun that constancy had become a habit not easily cast aside. Besides, power over a fellow being has its own peculiar ecstasy. Why relinquish it so soon?

"No, he isn't," she answered sharply and pushed him away. "I want to get up. I want tea and a bath and something to eat. What's become of that beast, Ibn? What did you do to him?"

"Nothing—yet," said Ballard absently. He was wondering if she was really angry; if so, then he had kicked the props from under his own momentary paradise by reminding her of Moreland.

Toward dawn Bongo staggered into the silent camp. Tired as he was he made for the unspanned ox cart and peered within its canopy. Only the little girl was there, no longer staring out of enormous empty eyes, but fallen forward, sleeping the sleep of exhaustion. Turning from the wagon he caught the gleam of familiar tents, perceived their air of peace and read a dozen other signs that all was well.

On his way to the nearest fire he stumbled against an obstruction and as he fell heard an agonized moan. Glancing back he made out the silhouette of Ibn's bulbous body manacled to a tree. Without troubling to rise, he crawled close to the embers, tumbled forward and buried his face in his arms. In the morning he made his report. Swayback was dead, ridden to death by a heavy man with small feet who had subsequently fled.

"You have done well," said Ballard, to Bongo's amazement. "Go get food and rest."

At that moment Josephine issued from her tent looking as fresh as a new pin.

"That was Bongo, wasn't it? Where's Swayback?" she asked.

"Never mind," said Ballard. "Sit down and eat. After breakfast I'd like you to attend a trial."

"Ibn's."

Half an hour later two chairs were placed in front of the banian, still seated on the ground with his back against the tree behind which his wrists were securely tied with a thong. He presented such a figure of misery that Josephine's heart might have softened had the sight of his obese body been less repulsive. As a matter of fact she had completely lost interest in Ibn, feeling she had paid him back twice over for what he had done to her. Her mind was very much elsewhere and scarcely had Ballard begun his interrogation when she slipped from the chair at his side and stole away, beckoning to Abdul to follow.

"You're a prisoner, Ibn," said Ballard, "charged with assault and attempt to kill a British subject. Think that out. Do you know what I'm going to do with you?"

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I DON'T THINK I ever enjoyed anything more than getting out of my old winter coat and into spring clothes," remarked a doctor's wife the other day. "I've practically gamboled on the green with spring skittishness . . . only I took it out looking at flowered chintzes. And ended up with plans for a whole new wardrobe for my bedroom . . . it's really going to be so pretty.

"Powder green wall paper with chintz draperies . . . white ground with bright red flowers. I think I'll have a white pique bedspread piped in red with an appliqued red monogram in the center. Then a dressing table skirt of white pique cut like a gored skirt. This will be piped with red, too, and finished at the top with a red patent leather belt, rather narrow, but buckled in the usual way. Milk glass lamp bases of course, with white shades finished off in red ball fringe. I think I'll decide on a powder green carpet to the baseboards, then have two little chairs and the chaise longue in the white and red chintz.

"But of course this is just a spring and summer costume for this room. I'm planning it so that I can have a change in winter but using the same walls and carpet. So far this room I am going to have alternate curtains, slip covers, spread and dressing table skirt. I think I'll get pale gold taffeta for the windows and make it up with rather wide ruffles . . . maybe 6 inches wide. And a creamy net and lace for the bedspread, as well as for the dressing table skirt—I'll use figurine lamps with cream lace shades here. For the two little chairs and the chaise I'm getting a flowered chintz on a cream ground and will make the slip covers with gold taffeta ruffles around the bottoms."

We approve heartily of a plan that gives a change of costume to a room with the seasons. And it doesn't cost a bit more because each set lasts just twice as long.

Senate Gets Repeal Bill On Red Rider

Wheeler Is Confident Measure Will Pass 'Overwhelmingly.'

Filibuster in House Is Expected to Delay Companion Bill.

By James D. Secrest.

A companion bill to the Sisson measure for repeal of the anti-red rider was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, as the education sub-committee of the House District Committee scheduled an executive session to act on the House bill.

The Senate bill significantly was referred to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor instead of the Senate District Committee. No explanation was made, but it was recalled that Senator King, Utah, chairman of the District Committee, approves the rider.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, is chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Wheeler Predicts Passage.

Senator Wheeler said he will ask for no hearings, as the House group has gone into the matter thoroughly, but he predicted the repeal proposal will pass the Senate "overwhelmingly."

The Senate may act on the Wheeler bill before the Sisson measure reaches the House floor, especially if anticipated filibuster moves are successful in delaying consideration.

Unless the bill is re-referred, the Sission measure, should it pass the House, would likewise be turned over to the Committee on Education and Labor for report, thus depriving the District Committee of jurisdiction.

Representative Kennedy, Maryland, chairman of the House subcommittee, called an executive meeting at that time will decide its future course.

A favorable report on the bill is a foregone conclusion, although consideration may be given to an amendment merely barring the advocacy of communism instead of an outright repeal of the rider.

Both Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, and school officials, however, have urged the sub-committee to report the repeal measure and thus meet the issue squarely.

Future Hearings Barred.

Kennedy said the sub-committee will hold no further hearings despite a proposal by Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, that the case be referred so that Representative Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, might be given a opportunity to substantiate her charges of gross inefficiency and pro-ocmmunism against the Board of Education.

He added that Mrs. Jenckes would be permitted to insert a supplemental statement if she desired, but she will not be cross-examined. She previously had refused to permit her to insert the 268-page transcript of hearings before the Blanton sub-committee.

Shortly after the sub-committee meeting was called, it was learned that Mrs. Jenckes will be out of the city on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Norton, in her letter to Kennedy, pointed out that it was the consensus of the full committee that Mrs. Jenckes be granted a special hearing "in order to get before the sub-committee the evidence on which she bases her charges against the Board of Education."

Kennedy said the ready to report the Sisson bill to the full committee by next Wednesday, although it will not be brought up in the House before April 27, the second District day of the month.

Woman Cab Driver To Go Under Knife

Mrs. Lillian Botkin, woman cab driver who delayed an appendicitis operation to feed her children, entered George Washington Hospital yesterday.

The woman said she put off the operation so she could drive her cab and pay the board bills of her two sons, Robert, 13, and Grover, 11. Mrs. Botkin stated emphatically yesterday that she was not on relief and would pay half of the bill. The Community Chest, she stated, will pay the rest.

Physicians at the hospital said the operation probably will be performed today. Mrs. Botkin said she's glad its going to be over with.

She expressed the hope that "my fares won't forget me while I'm away, because I'm going to need money when I get out."

Little 'Busy Bees' Aid Disaster Victims; Red Cross Collects $2,531,171 as 13 Cities Oversubscribe; Task of Assisting Homeless Doubles.

Two dollars of $417.74 contributed to the Red Cross Flood Relief Fund through The Washington Post came from the "Busy Bee Society."

Accompanying the Busy Bees' gift was this letter:

"My name is Mary Beth Smith. Three of my friends and I have a club called the Busy Bee Society. The other girls are Rebecca, Patsy and Hazel. We gave a puppet show for the people that are in the flood. Please take this money with the best wishes, from the Busy Bees."

The $417 received at The Post yesterday brought the total fund to $1,588.52. The Red Cross announced that $2,531,171 has been received toward ten goal of $3,000,000.

At the same time, the Red Cross said the relief task had increased heavily and was more than double that which had been anticipated. There are 103,000 families under care in the flood stricken communities. The great effort now being made, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, pointed out last night was in evacuating the refugees from temporary shelter into vacant houses until such time as their homes could be repaired or rebuilt.

Rising waters in the Ohio Valley in the past 24 hours added greatly to the number of distressed families.

Congress Gets Plan For 'Drunks' Farm'

The long-delayed proposal to establish a "drunkards' farm" for District inebriates reached Congress yesterday and was promptly introduced in the House by Chairman Norton of the House District Committee.

A companion bill will be offered to the Senate today by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, who has previously indorsed the idea first broached by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The measures provide that the Police Court may place the defendant in the custody of the Board of Public Welfare whenever it appears he is an inebriate.

An authorization of $2,000,000 to purchase, rent, or build quarters or "a farm" for drunkards is carried in the bill.

Security Bill Asks Broader Relief in D. C.

Rep. Scott Introduces Measure Indorsed by 25 Labor Groups.

Partial Unemployment and Maternity Aid Are Provided.

A far-reaching social security bill for the District that is much broader than either the national or local security acts was introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Scott (Democrat), California.

The measure is designed to provide more adequate relief than in the act passed by Congress last year for unemployed and aged, and in addition it covers partial unemployment and maternity aid.

It has the backing of the District Association of Social Insurance, which comprises 25 affiliated labor organizations and a membership of 4,000. The association plans to circulate petitions for signatures indorsing the bill.

Although no Congressional action is expected this session, Scott, a young liberal and a former school teacher, said he hopes to establish in the District a testing ground for a much broader social insurance plan than the present act.

Prolonged Prologue.

The breadth of the Scott bill is indicated in a prolonged prologue which opens with the statement:

"It is the obligation of the Government to insure every worker against loss of income due to unemployment, old age, or other disability.

"Under modern economic conditions, it is impossible for most workers to secure themselves against loss of income due to loss of work, for their earnings, during employment, are barely enough to provide for more than immediate living expenses."

The measure provides unemployment insurance for all classes of workers, whether they are paid by wages or salaries, whether they work on the farm or in a profession, or whether they are self-employed.

It guarantees them an income while unemployed equal to their average earnings up to $20 a week and not less than $10 a week. Provision for dependents ranges from $3 to $5 each.

The measure carries an authorization of $20,000,000 to be paid out of the Treasury. Additional funds may be raised, it suggests, by taxing high incomes, corporate surpluses and "other accumulated wealth." Pay-roll taxes and sales taxes are barred.

Must Accept Employment.

Unemployed persons are required to accept employment offered to them, to be eligible for aid, unless the employment carries a condition that they join company unions or not join labor organizations.

Old-age insurance is provided on a scale similar to that for unemployment.

The scale of relief may be adjusted from time to time in accordance with the changes in the cost of living in Washington.

Administration of the act is placed in the hands of the District Workers Social Insurance Commission. It would be composed of one commissioner and six members. The commissioner is to be appointed by the President for a three-year term at $5,000 a year.

The six members would be named by the President from a panel of names submitted by local workers' organizations.

Merit Bill Passed.

Sale Is Asked Of 3 Million In Gas Bonds

Insurance Company Will Buy Securities, to Yield 4¼%.

Approval of a $3,000,000 bond issue, bearing 4¼ per cent interest, to be sold at par to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., was asked of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by the Washington Gas Light Co.

Half of the proposed bond issue —$1,500,000—would be used to retire that amount of 6 per cent outstanding bank loans and for capital additions.

Major additions to the company's plant must be made immediately to meet prospective demands, it was said. Based on consumption figures of the past year and the increase in demand, company officers estimated the present capacity would be exceeded by demand next winter unless capacity is increased.

Spending Is Undecided.

How much of the $1,500,000 will go to retire bank loans and how much will be used for plant additions has not been determined. The division will depend to some extent on how much of the loans the banks say must be paid, Roger Whiteford, of company counsel, said. John Bruton, jr., of Sullivan & Cromwell, New York law firm, and Whiteford filed the proposal late yesterday with Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman.

Outstanding bank loans amount to $700,000. These loans are costing the company something like $42,000 a year in interest. Total bonded indebtedness of the company now is $16,199,652. The proposed bond issue would make a net increase in this of $1,500,000, but there would be an annual saving in interest on both the bonds to be refunded and the bank loans to be retired, it was pointed out.

The new bonds would not be put on the market and, inasmuch as the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. proposes ot take the whole issue the new bonds would not have to pass through the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, it was said.

Offer of the insurance company, it is said, is contingent on consummation of the deal within two or three weeks. Elgen said the commission probably would formally consider the proposal early next week. Although commission officials refused to predict what they would do it is believed that prompt approval will be given unless study of details of the proposition discloses features not apparent on its face.

Seeks Bond Permission.

The company wants to pledge its interest in the Prince Georges County company to secure its new bonds and also wants permission to accept bonds of its subsidiaries in payment of loans to these made by the parent company.

The bond issue, Whiteford said, wil lnot interfere with financial plans of the company which are dependent on enactment of the pending gas company merger bill. That bill authorizes expansion of the capital structure of the company. Under present low Congress has restricted the issue of stock and the company, despite its largely expanded business during the last several years, has ben unable to add to its capital. The result has been operation under an increasing interest bearingdebt.

The company now has outstanding 130,000 shares of stock. These have a par value of $20 a share, a total of only $2,600,000, in contrast to the $18,000,000 interest bearing borrowed capital with which the company is operating. Enactment of the merger bil, Whiteford said, would permit issuance of additional stock, some of the proceeds of which might be used to retire additional bonds ,and part of which would be used to extend and better the company plant. The new bond issue proposal was worked out because of the imminence of maturity of certain obligations and the uncertainty of Congressional action, although enactent of the merger bill is expected in view of the widespread indorsement of it.

Tax Ruling Saves $3,000,000 For Three Scully Estate Heirs

Appeals Board Decides Property and Securities Transfers Were Not Made by Widow in Contemplation of Death.

The Board of Tax Appeals' understanding of "the pride of the parent in the success of the children" yesterday saved the heirs of Enriqueta Angela Scully, of Washington, from paying an estate tax deficiency of more than $3,000,000.

Ernest H. Van Fossan, of the board, ruled that transfers of property made by Mrs. Scully to her children were not made "in contemplation of death," but because of the "satisfaction that would be derived from watching the donees administer their respective estates—the pride of the parent in the success of the children."

The transfers mentioned were made in 1918 and 1927 to Mrs. Scully's children, Thomas and Frederick Scully and Angela Scully Parry. At the time of the first transfer in 1918, the children were all in their late thirties. Mrs. Scully died in England in 1932 at the age of 82, leaving an estate valued at more than $10,000,000. She had a home in Washington at 1401 Sixteenth street northwest, which is still maintained by her sons.

Life Story Unfolded.

Brought out in the hearing was the life story of Mrs. Scully's husband, William Scully, the almost feudal landlord of 200,000 acres of land in four Middle-Western States. He died in 1906.

Born in Ireland in 1821, Scully came to this country in 1850 with a small amount of capital and an expert knowledge of soils, lands and agriculture.

He went out into the Middle West, analyzing the soil, carefully determining the best farming country. First he bought land from the Government. Later, after the Civil War, he acquired from ex-soldiers 160-acre tracts they had been awarded by the Government.

Gradually he built up a tremendous acreage throughout Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. These lands he rented to tenant farmers, setting up a system of agents and sub-agents to insure proper maintenance and supervision.

Besides collecting rentals, it was the duty of the agents and sub-agents to advise tenants of the best seed and of the advantages of suiting crops to soil. They also supervised improving the land by installing systems of tile drains, ditches and dams.

One Son Died.

About 1875 Scully married. He was then 54, his wife 25. Their children were born in the years between 1878 and 1881. One, William, died when an infant. The others are the present heirs.

Scully, recognizing the potential value of his vast estates, began early to prepare his children to administer them. He sent Thomas, the oldest, to Washington to study law with the firm of Ralston & Siddons. Equipped with a post-hole auger, he took both Thomas and Frederick on drives over his land to teach them the various kinds of soil and sub-soil.

Worried lest his children fail to administer his estate properly after his death, he wrote in 1900 a memorandum entitled "Suggestions to My Wife." In this memorandum he set forth his opinions on the disposition of his property. He had previously deeded to his wife all of his lands in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

Estate Finally Divided.

After his death, they continued in the office, working for their mother. The daughter, Angela, married an Englishman named Parry.

During Mrs. Scully's last years she spent much time in England, living on a large estate she leased there. She paid her sons salaries, but until 1918 refused their requests that she divide the estate, adhering to her husband's advice not to distribute the property until she judged the children had sufficient age and experience to take care of it.

In 1918, during which year the income from the property amounted to almost $800,000, Mrs. Scully divided her lands among her three children. Further property, consisting almost entirely of securities, she divided equally among them in 1927.

She died in England in 1932, satisfied that her husband's estate had been wisely administered.

Two Missing Girls Found in Theater

Two 15-year-old Washington girls Gertie Herl, of 648 Park road northwest, and Virgie Barkley, of 510 Newton place northwest—reported missing from their homes last Friday, were located yesterday in a downtown theater.

Intrigued by stories of the "Sunny South," the girls were believed to have started hitch-hiking to the Southland. A cab driver told police Wednesday he had seen two girls answering their descriptions walking in the downtown area.

Dorothy Douglas, a policewoman, located the girls in the theater and turned them over to their parents. The girls said they left home because they did not wish to go to school and wanted to go to work.

Critics' Award for Best Play of Season Reported Bestowed Upon "Winterset"

Anderson Play Chosen by the 'Death Watch'

Comes to National Monday; Advance Peek at July; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Confidential advices from an authentic and reliable source bring word to this desk that Maxwell Anderson's play of "Winterset," coming to the National Theater on Monday night for an engagement of one week, has been honored by receiving the New York Critics' Award as the best play of the 1935-36 season on Broadway.

This is a signal and deserved tribute to the playwright who won the Pulitzer Prize with his "Both Your Houses" some three seasons or so ago and really carries more weight than the recognition by the Pulitzer play committee, since it represents the consensus of opinion of the full roster of active commentators constituting Broadway's so-called "Death Watch."

It will be recalled that the last decision made by the Pulitzer judges, when the board consisted of Clayton Hamilton, Walter Prichard Eaton and Austin Strong, was reversed by the inner council of Columbia University. The board of judges promptly resigned and has not served in like capacity since.

Unlike Pulitzer Method.

An entirely different condition exists in the case of the Critics' Award. This is bestowed by vote of the active practitioners of their profession and bespeaks the deliberate and mature judgment of a group whose business it is to appraise plays as a vocation, rather than as an avocation. If I remember correctly, the Critics' Award also carries with it a cash prize which, of course, adds to its material value, if not its purely academic worth.

In the formulation of sound and substantial drama and the writing of dialogue that plumbs deeper than the mere superficialities of life, Maxwell Anderson has only one equal among contemporary native playwrights and that is Eugene O'Neill. Anderson, in point of fact, by virtue of his "Mary of Scotland," "Valley Forge" and "Winterset" may be safely ranked among the minor poets, the majestic cadences of blank verse being his device for lending dignity and power to the climacteric passages of his dramas.

It is expected that announcement of the bestowal of the Critics' Award upon "Winterset" will be made in the New York press this morning.

In making the statement in this space yesterday morning that Walter Hampden would appear at the National the week of April 13, Easter Week, in repertoire, this column either was misinformed or misunderstood what was communicated to it over the phone—probably the latter. Mr. Sam Weller, veteran avant courier, who is in town in behalf of Mr. Hampden and his current enterprise, informs me in no uncertain terms that his principal is appearing on tour only in "Cyrano de Bergerac," the romance by Edmond Rostand, as adapted to Mr. Hampden's exclusive uses by Brian Hooker. The Hampden company now is playing in Chicago and enjoying the same sort of enthusiastic box-office support that this star and this play always attract.

One reason that no other play can be combined with "Cyrano" on the road is that this one production is of such magnitude that three 70-foot baggage cars are needed for its transportation. Since practically all of the Hampden plays require similarly heavy settings, the impracticability of a "repertoire" tour is obvious.

Heat Wave Entertainment.

It is one of the far-sighted and resourceful scriveners in the publicity department of the local Warner offices, presided over by Master Frank La Falce, who takes his typewriter on his lap to suggest that while the hot and humid days of July and August are still months away, there is a touch of summer in the Earle Building, where, on the seventh floor, functions the Washington staff of the Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, with General Zone Manager John J. Payette cracking the whip.

The reason seems to be that that confidential—more or less—Warner house organ, called "What's Happening on the Warner Lot," in its last issue, outlines what the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters may expect in the way of pictures along about the time when their refrigeration plants make all of Washington's downtown, first-run motion picture houses the coolest spots in the District.

Two Big Ones.

It is confided that great store is being laid by two of the "super-super" brand of productions being readied for summertime release. These are "Angel of Mercy," based on the story of Florence Nightingale, and "The Charge of the Light Brigade," inspired by the famous poem of Alfred Lord Tennyson.

Kay Francis will assume the role of the famous humanitarian in "Angel of Mercy," a tense and exciting biographical drama of the woman who transformed the profession of nursing soldiers on the field of battle from one of disrepute to a symbol of sacrificial and sublime devotion to the most merciful impulses of the human heart. Scenes in the Crimea will entail the employment of thousands of extras for this picture.

In "The Charge of the Light Brigade," Errol Flynn will have the star role. Flynn is the handsome young Irish actor who leaped from "bit" parts to national popularity in one bound as the swaggering "Captain Blood" in the film version of the Rafael Sabatini novel of that name. The climax of this picture, of course, will be the charge of 697 horsemen into annihilating gunfire.

Some Light Ones, Too.

Not all of the summertime releases are to be executed on this gigantic scale, however. Many items of light, gay comedy and typically seasonable hot-weather entertainment are embraced in the Warner plans. Outstanding among these will be "Earthworm Tractors," with Joe E. Brown the star of a cast that also will include Guy Kibbee, June Travis and Craig Reynolds. This is based on the popular Saturday Evening Post stories by William Hazlitt Upson.

Plans are completed for the shooting of "Stage Struck," a new musical; an Edward G. Robinson thriller, "Bullets or Ballots;" a new Perry Mason detective yarn, with Warren William again detecting; "Two Against the World," which will feature Humphrey Bogart as a reward for his fine work as Duke Mantee, the killer, in "The Petrified Forest;" "Murder in the Big House," and several others. On some of these shooting already has begun.

This may be looking a long way ahead and some of the present plans may not materialize as now expected, but for those who won't be taking any vacation this year it ought, at least, to provide the basis of some pleasant anticipation.

Since the ubiquitous Mr. Norman Pyle, the enfant terrible of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploitation department, which performs its stints under the flamboyant direction of one "Bill" Ferguson, is constantly in this desk's thinning hair in the matter of "The Great Ziegfeld" and what a whale of a picture it is, we will concede such corroboratory evidence as may be adduced from the mere publication of the picture's cast.

These, then, are the obscure tyros who may be expected to be seen in the principal roles when this Gargantuan production comes to the National Theater the night of Sunday, April 19. William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Frank Morgan, Fannie Brice, Virginia Bruce, Reginald Owen, Ray Bolger, Ernest Cossart, Joseph Cawthorn, Nat Pendleton, Harriet Hector, Jean Chatburn, Paul Irving, Herman Bing, Charles Judels, Marcelle Corday, Raymond Walburn, A. A. Trimble and Buddy Doyle.

The remarkable part of all this is that Nothing has been Pyled on about an "all-star cast." If that isn't one, then never has any such thing ever been beheld by these slowly dimming eyes!

Band Boys Band Together.

Artists who were started on their climb to fame by Paul Whiteman, "the king of jazz," yesterday in New York formed the Paul Whiteman Alumni Association and planned to fete their benefactor on Sunday, according to Associated Press dispatches just to hand.

With Morton Downey as president and Bing Crosby as vice president, they will present Whiteman with a gold-panelled door to his new office, which will be marked "The Door to Opportunity." It will bear 40 names, among them Downey, Crosby, George Gershwin, whose "Porgy and Bess" ended its season here last Saturday night; John Boles, Ferde Grofe, Helen Jepson, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Gogo Delys and writers Eastwood Lane, Leo Sowerby and Mary Margaret McBride.

A dozen orchestra leaders also are included, among them Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey, Charley Dornberger, Henry Busse, "Red" Nichols, Lennie Hayton and Ross Gorman.

At the party on Sunday, each singer will sing the tune that first attracted Whiteman's attention. More fun!

Ever since Warner Brothers started production of "Anthony Adverse," Hervey Allen's outsize novel, comments have been made upon the length to which the film necessarily will have to run. Now comes word that the advance announcement, or "trailer" for "Anthony" has been proportioned to the footage of the picture and is being made as a regular short-reel subject, requiring a week for production!

The trailer cast is being handled like any short-subject unit, with manager, budget, business manager, director and technical crew. The advance film will not include a single scene from "Adverse" but will feature the history of the ponderous best-seller itself. Odd if it should turn out to be better than the film it is designed to celebrate!

Endurance Contest.

And that reminds me. I must finish that book before the picture comes out. I've been at it two years now and have got it down to where I have only 998 pages to go!

Sylvia Sidney, Actress, Files Divorce Petition

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—The first brief matrimonial venture of 26-year-old Sylvia Sidney, brunette film star, landed in a divorce court here today—wrecked by her career.

Filing a divorce suit against Bennett Cerf, young New York publisher with whom she eloped last October 1, the actress said her husband didn't understand Hollywood and objected to the demands her work placed on her time.

The formal charge was cruelty.

Leslie Adams Dies; Broadway Actor

New York, March 26 (AP).—Leslie Adams, prominent stage actor recently seen in the chief role in "A Room in Red and White" on Broadway, died today in New York Hospital after a short illness. He was 49.

Adams collapsed last Saturday at rehearsal of "Left Turn," in which he was to appear in the leading part. He was hurried to the hospital, but his illness was not thought to be serious enough to warrant replacing him in the company.

Adams, a comparatively recent arrival on Broadway, made remarkable strides in the past two years and had reached a position where motion pictures were bidding for his services.

Four years ago he scored a pronounced success in his first big Broadway role in "Carrie Nation." He made an even greater success in "Goodbye Again."

Having won the Pulitzer Prize with his play, "Both Your Houses," Maxwell Anderson, author of "Mary of Scotland," "Valley Forge," and many other dramas of the first rank, now is reported to have been further honored by being accorded the Critics' Award for his play of "Winterset," coming to the National Theater on Monday night, with Burgess Meredith and Margo in the principal roles. The portrait study of Playwright Anderson appearing above is one of his most recent.

Nats Outhit Red Sox, But Drop Their Third Straight, 10 to 8

Lewis' Great Day at Bat Is Futile

Infielder Hits 3 Triples and Single but Falters With 2 Errors.

Five-Run Attack at Start Is Wasted by Russell in Loosely-Played Game.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 26.—The Nats succeeded in losing their third straight ball game this afternoon after it was feared that they were about to reform and risk the shock of a victory.

But again they proved an habitual flash in the pan. They rolled up a five-run lead against the expensive Boston Red Sox in the first inning and two innings later were trailing 6-5. It all ended in a 10-8 triumph for Boston.

With their 13 hits compared to Boston's 10, it was quite a trick for the Nats to achieve defeat, but Pitcher Jack Russell rose to the occasion in the last three innings and bounced base hits unerringly against the Boston bats to make matters conclusive.

There was also the item of three Washington errors, two of 'em by Buddy Lewis, back in the early running. There was grave apprehension for a time that young Lewis would undo all the good he was doing the Red Sox when he slammed out three triples and a single in his first four times at bat, but eventually he had let in more runs than he had driven in.

Linke in Fair Form.

Ed Linke pitched tolerably well in the first five innings, holding Boston to five hits and the 7-7 tie score he handed over to Jack Russell in the sixth was considerably tainted by three errors behind him. But Russell relieved whatever tension there was to the contest by immediately pitching a cluster of hits to the Red Sox.

The Nats accumultaed their 5-0 lead in the first inning off Manuel Salvo, late of the Coast League, the first of the three rookie pitchers Joe Cronin sent to the mound in a fine gesture of contempt for his father-in-law's ball club.

Dee Miles, who is on something of a hitting spree, launched proceedings against Salvo with a single past Bill Werber and Lewis unloosed his first triple, a vicious shot into leftfield. A pair of walks to Powell and Travis then preceded three straight hits—singles by Kuhel and Holbrook, and a double by Linke—that accounted for the last of the five runs.

After Lewis' triple that opened the second inning had been wasted when Almada threw him out at the plate on Powell's fly, the Sox began to fight back. Foxx and Cronin drew walks, McNair's grounder was booted by Travis and Werber and Rick Ferrell singled to reduce the score to 5-3.

In the third inning, young Lewis began to display great hostility toward the Nats. He muffed Cramer's grounder, and then he muffed Foxx's. Joe Cronin drew a walk and eventually all three scored with Werber's long double to left, bringing two of 'em home.

Joe Cascarella began to feel the power in the Nats' bats in the fourth. Lewis made his third straight hit—a single. Myer walked, Powell singled past Werber and Kuhel collected his third straight single, a shot to right. The uprising netted the Nats two runs and a 7-6 lead.

Against Linke the Sox caught up again in the fifth when Heinie Manush singled, took second on a passed ball and scored on Cronin's single past Lewis.

With Russell in the box, the Sox took an 8-7 lead in the sixth after Rick Ferrell doubled, and made it 10-3 in the eighth, when Manush and Foxx bounced singles off Russell's offerings and Werber varied matters with his second double of the day.

His Share of Dodgers Not for Sale—McKeever

New York, March 26 (AP).—Stephen W. McKeever, aged president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, today denied the McKeever interests in the baseball club were for sale at any price.

The judge, now 82 years old, issued his statement after Joseph A. Gilleaudeau, vice president and treasurer, declared in Orlando that the club was for sale to any prospective purchaser who could offer $2,000,000.

Ed Don George Easily Downs Managoff

Patrons Unappreciative of 29-Minute Affair; Detton Wins.

By George Considine.

With the exception of two or three flurries of fisticuffs, the session proved to be strictly a scientific affair, both men exhibiting a thorough knowledge of grips. But, alas, the huge crowd, thirsty for fireworks, failed to appreciate the science and spent its time stifling yawns.

As is the custom of world wrestling champs, George was content the first 10 minutes to defend himself. First he broke a headlock and then an Indian deathlock with consummate ease.

Ivan Forgets Himself.

Managoff, realizing that something exciting had to be done and done quickly to arouse the slumbering spectators, clamped on a meritorious short arm scissors, which he held for 7 minutes despite the genuine effort of the champ.

At the 20-minute mark Ivan momentarily forgot himself and bashed Ed Don to the mat. He followed up with a body press and would have caused an unheard of upset if George hadn't squirmed to the ropes.

After that, however, it was just a question of how long the champion wanted to work. Punishing the Russian's left leg unmercifully for several minutes, George so weakened him that he fell easy prey to a series of body slams and finally that airplane spin.

Koverly Tosses Baxter.

Semifinally Dean Detton, who substituted for Hans Steinke, persuaded Journeyman Jawn Katan to give up the ghost via a rolling leglock 24 minutes. Detton behaved himself until Journeyman Jawn tied his head in the ropes. That was where Katan made his mistake.

In an inexcusable display of rowdiness Wild George Koverly, the perfect villain, destroyed Tom (Handsome Harry) Baxter in 17½ minutes amid boos and catcalls.

And Little Abie Coleman and Hot Tom Alley gave the party a running start with a half-hour of hilarious hostilities. They said it was a draw.

Utah State Triumphs.

Kansas City, March 26 (AP).—The State handed the University of Kansas basketball tea its first defeat in 24 games this season by winning tonight, 42 to 27, and evening at 1-all their Olympic inter-district series. The two teams wil play the third and final game Saturday night.

Maryland Nine Wins, 5 to 2, in 1936 Debut

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With "Li'l George" Wood and Walter Johnson—also some shucks as a ball player a few years ago—sharing pitching honors, the University of Maryland launched its 1936 diamond campaign in highly complimentary fashion yesterday at College Park by pounding out a 5-2 victory over Ohio State.

A throng of 1,500 fans, chilled to the marrow by a biting wind that swept the field, saw Johnson pitch no-hit, no-run ball for one throw before giving way to Wood, who continued the good work and limited the scarlet-clad Buckeyes to a half dozen measly hits over the remainder of the route. Johnson's effort, a perfect strike that crashed into Knocky Thomas' mitt with 1916 gusto, officially opened the campaign.

The big hit-and-run man of the afternoon was Charley Keller, the stocky youngster with big league ambitions who has been shifted to shortstop. He bunted a cute little fly into right field for three bases, patted a screaming single to center, and scored one run. Keller's triple would have cleared he right field wall at Griffith Stadium, and thereafter the Ohio boys played back toward the outskirts of Hyattsville when he came to bat.

Jim Peters, Ohio's ace hurler, held Maryland to seven hits, but the Terrapins gathered them in clusters, scoring two runs in the fifth innings and another in the seventh just to play safe. Hamilton's error on Bill Bryant's high fly, which went for a triple and scored Keller with the second run of the inning, didn't help Peters' cause any. Keller's triple was preceded by Thomas' single.

Thomas started the fifth inning uprising, too, drawing a pass and stealing second, whence he scored on Wheeler's two-bagger to left. Keller promptly brought Wheeler home with a lusty single that almost knocked the centerfielder down when he took it on the first bounce.

Al Sery brought Ohio's first run over the plate in the second inning reaching second on a single and Klamaski's sacrifice, and scoring on Dorris' clean hit to left.

The Buckeye's second run was the result of a daring bit of strategy that culminated in a sucessful double-steal. Dye scratched an infield hit and raced around to third when McCarthy fumbled Raudabush's single to right field. A couple of pitches later Raudabush started for second, drawing a throw from Thomas that was too high to catch him, and Dye slid safely home while Stonebraker was spearing the erratic pitch.

The teams will meet in the second and final game of their series this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Misses Wattles, Cothran Win At Augusta

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 26 (AP).—Overcoming serious challenges in their semifinal matches, Miss Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., and Miss Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, N. Y., today entered the championship round of the sixth annual Augusta women's invitation tournament.

They will play for the championship in an 18-hole test over the rugged hill course of the Augusta Country Club starting at 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, tomorrow.

Miss Cothran eliminated Miss Edith Begg, of Cleveland, Ohio, 2 up, this afternoon after staving off a belated rally by her opponent, while Miss Wattles, runner-up in 1935, conquered Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, veteran golfer and former winner of the Augusta fixture, 1 up in 19 holes.

Turning in the best medal score of the day, a two-over-par 81, Miss Wattles rolled in a 15-foot putt on the eighteenth green to square the match and achieved victory on the first extra hole by getting down in par 5, as Mrs. Crews, trying hard for a birdie, missed and took a 6.

They were even through the first nine holes. Miss Wattles toured the outgoing nine in 41, two over par, while Mrs. Crews needed 42 strokes. Both shot the incoming nine in par 40. After encountering difficulty with her woods on the first nine, Mrs. Crews settled down and took the lead on the seventeenth with a birdie 4, but Miss Wattles dropped her long putt to send the match to overtime.

Greenberg, No. 1 Holdout, Signs With Tigers After Conference

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 26.—Hank Greenberg, last of the important holdouts, signed a contract to play first base for the world champion Detroit Tigers after a long conference with club officials tonight. Greenberg arrived at the club's training camp today and immediately donned his uniform for a solo workout.

Terms of the contract were not announced, but all parties said they were "happy."

Greenberg, who led the American League in home runs last season, arrived here today.

Soon after the Tigers returned from Bradenton, where they played an exhibition game, the husky infielder went into a conference with Manager Mickey Cochrane, owner Walter O. Briggs and Walter O. Briggs, jr., assistant secretary-treasurer.

The conference lasted two hours and 45 minutes.

Both Greenberg and the Tiger management have been tight-lipped and there was no basis for an estimate of the salary the husky slugger will receive. His 1935 salary was reported to be $12,000.

The general opinion here was that Greenberg succeeded in obtaining a substantial raise in pay, and may have signed for around $20,000.

The climax in negotiations that led to Greenberg's signing was a telephone conversation with Charles Navin, Detroit official, early this week.

Navin told him to report to the training camp here and talk terms with Cochrane. Previously, Greenberg vowed he would make no advances.

Dizzy Dean, St. Louis pitcher, came to terms with the Cards Sunday and Paul Dean signed today. Charley Ruffing, New York Yankee pitcher, also ended his holdout today.

HANK GREENBERG.

Bradenton, Fla., March 26.—The St. Louis Cardinals, profited by five Detroit errors, today helped 1934 World Series history to repeat itself by defeating the Tigers, 8 to 5, in an exhibition game.

With the count tied at 4-4, the Cards sewed up the game with a four-run attack in the sixth inning, aided by two costly errors and a wild pitch. Rudy York, filling in at first base for Detroit's hold-out, Hank Greenberg, got a futile home run with the bases empty in the ninth inning, but also set off the crack-up of the Tiger defense with an error in the fatal sixth.

The terms of Ruffing's contract were not announced, but it was believed he had signed at or close to the offered figure of $12,000.

Bartow, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Two former big league hurlers gave the Rochester Internationals a 6-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today, ending a three-game winning streak for Brooklyn. Ray Harrell, formerly of the Cardinals, and Lee Munns, who was with the Dodgers last year, combined to limit Casey Stengel's team, composed largely of rookies, to seven hits. Max Butcher, who made his first exhibition-game start after being laid up for ten days with an infected knee, was hit freely as were his successors, Wayne Osborne and Jake Houtekamer.

Stark Out as Baseball Coach at Dartmouth

Aintree Test Awaited by 35 Horses

Golden Miller Favorite for Grand National; Bostwick U.S. Hope.

AINTREE, England, March 26.—Thirty-five horses, six of them American owned, will tackle Aintree's grueling jumps tomorrow in the ninety-eighth running of the Grand National, but the British public, content to let bygones be bygones, could see only Golden Miller as the winner tonight.

Despite the shocking failure of Dorothy Paget's big 9-year-old gelding in the National last year, British punters had made him the topheavy favorite for the world's most exacting equine test—4½ miles of the toughest kind of going. They saw no reason why the top weight of 175 pounds should stop the Miller, which saved bookmakers thousands of dollars last year when he fell early in the race.

The final call overnight found the Miller quoted at the rapidly shortening odds of 11 to 4, with Mrs. Violet Mundy's Avenger moving up to replace Maj. Noel Furlong's Reynoldstown, the 1935 winner, as the second choice at 6 to 1. The odds on Reynoldstown lengthened to 10 to 1, largely due, it was believed, to the fact that Frank Furlong, who guided him home last year, will not be in the saddle.

Upward of 250,000 persons are expected to pace the picturesque course, hoping for a fleeting view of the horses as they take out over "the country" for their journey over the 30 jumps that have taken a heavy toll of equine jumpers since Lottery won the first rough-and-tumble affair in 1839.

Riding with the horses will be the hopes of scores of people the world over, who were lucky enough to draw an Irish Sweepstakes ticket on one of the starters. Upon the outcome depends the distribution of some $7,000,000 with the fortunate holders of tickets on the winner receiving around $150,000 each.

America's hope of a fourth victory depended largely on George H. (Pete) Bostwick, youthful millionaire sportsman, and his Irish-bred gelding, Castle Irwell. Last year Castle Irwell tossed Pete the second time over the canal turn while running with the leaders. Bostwick was confident tonight, however, that he would be the first American to ride his own horse to victory.

ARROW BOCK BEER

SPRING—the sign of the goat—the chirp of the robin—a street piano and the music going 'round and 'round. Sap rising in the trees—the sun riding higher in the sky—and ARROW BOCK BEER at your favorite place.

That's Spring! And as you bury your face in the cool sharp tang of ARROW BOCK that has aged and bubbled its way to goodness since last October, you know it's Spring.

Ever since beer came back, ARROW BOCK BEER has been famous as the best BOCK in town. It's better because it costs more to brew.

ARROW BOCK BEER is made from the finest caramel malt we could find in the country; its rich amber color comes from the best European black roasted malt. The hops are the most expensive the market affords—money can't buy any finer!

Don't be satisfied with just Bock! Don't let a little dark coloring mislead you! Insist on ARROW BOCK. And when its foamy, heady, Springy richness goes down to the spot where good drinks go—you'll say "THERE IS BOCK BEER!" GLOBE BREWING CO., Baltimore, Maryland.

Clark, now with the Baltimore Orioles in Florida, came from the capital sandlots to join the Richmond club in 1926. He did poorly but the next year led the league in batting with .387 and was sold to Boston for the record Richmond mark of $15,000.

College Boxers Getting Set for Olympic Trials Today

Fred Cramer, Southern Conference heavyweight champion, and one of two University of Virginia entrants, takes a few last pokes at the bag. The best collegiate big boys in the Nation are entered.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Sarasota, Fla., March 26.

IT IS no concern of mine, but, if I were Bucky Harris, I would begin to view with some alarm the consistent inconsistencies of young Buddy Lewis, the 19-year-old lad to whom Harris gave the third base job on the Washington club the moment uniforms were issued February 24.

It was on the recommendation of Clyde Milan, Chattanooga manager, a very baseball-wise man, indeed, that Harris gave Lewis the third base post to have and to hold. Milan staked his baseball reputation on Lewis' prospects. He declared unqualifiedly that Lewis was already a big league infielder, that he may not be a sensation at the bat, but that he could field the position to the satisfaction of the severest critics.

POVICH.

Well, Lewis has crossed everybody up. Ever since the first game in the South, he has whaled the living daylights out of the ball, but at third base he has been an unqualified palooka. One wild throw daily has been his usual performance, but of late he has been kicking ground balls around in addition. He has been letting himself get caught in the middle of fast hops and generally misplaying his position.

He still has the third base job and Harris is leaving him there, but it is in tribute only to his socking. Were Lewis not slamming the ball harder than anybody else on the club at this writing, Harris long ago would have summoned Ossie Bluege back to the third base position, but Lewis' socking has completely captured his fancy. On the assumption that the rookie will settle down at third base, and that Clyde Milan did, indeed, know whereof he spoke, Harris is willing to string along with Lewis.

With five weeks of training in the South behind it, the Washington club of 1936 differs from the Washington team of 1935 in only one respect, apparently. That is speed on the bases. Jesse Hill, in left-field and Buddy Lewis at third base have injected added foot into the line-up, but in all other phases of play the Nats are strikingly like the club that finished sixth last year.

The pitchers of 1936 are, apparently, the same pitchers of 1935. There are Buck Newsom, Ed Linke and Earl Whitehill as the nub of the staff. Nine others among the 15 pitchers on the squad are a sure bet not even to stay with the club, much less take a regular turn. Jimmy Deshong has yet to prove his value, as have Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver. Of this trio, Appleton alone has been even mildly impressive.

Harris has begun to lose faith in Dick Lanahan, whose added weight has affected his control, apparently, and Henry Coppola, whom Harris deemed as his best young prospect, has a sore arm complex that bodes ill for his success. The others on the squad are a dime-a-dozen.

But nothing has occurred down here in the South to disturb the belief that the Nats are the same swell-hitting team that they were last year, when, for the most of the season, they led the league in team averages. The consistent socking that the team can bring to bear from the top to the bottom of its line-up is its chief redeeming feature. If the Nats get anywhere in the 1936 race, it will be their hitting that will be responsible, barring a miraculous reform in the pitching.

In Short—

Joe Cronin confided to Boston newspapermen early today that Manuel Salvo was the best of his rookie pitchers . . . Salvo gave up five hits, two walks and five runs in the first inning against the Nats, so draw your own conclusions . . . When Mel Almada threw Buddy Lewis out at the plate today when he attempted to score on Powell's fly to right field, Lewis became the third victim of Almada's arm in three days . . . The team that Cronin placed on the field today will be the team that will open the season for the Red Sox, the pitchers excepted . . . Heinie Manush has crowded Dusty Cooke out of the left-field job and Eric McNair has won the second base post from Oscar Mellilo . . . Frank Peticolas, who last year was hailed by Clark Griffith as the Washington club's new Fred Marberry, allowed 12 runs in the first inning when pitching for Chattanooga against Albany . . . Huck Wynne, Washington sandlot star, started the game behind the bat for Chattanooga and celebrated his first appearance in organized baseball with a clean single to center . . . Bill Coyle, Washington radio announcer, scored a genuine birdie on the Sarasota links today . . . his drive on the first hole kayoed a robin that failed to duck.

Spirited Fight Seen in A.A.U. Swim Meet

At Least Six Teams Are in Running for District Crown Tonight.

A spirited tussle for the team swimming championship of the District is forecast for tonight when the annual District A. A. U. title meet takes over the Shoreham pool for an evening of fast splashing. No less than six teams are decidedly in the running for the title won last year by Shoreham after the normal scoring had found it tied with the Y. M. C. A.

Heading the list as a slight favorite will be the Y. M. C. A., with George Washington and the Shoreham rated next in close order. All three clubs have near equal representation in the big event which has drawn a total of more than 75 entries. Central High, Western High and the Ambassador teams are certain to figure vitally in the final team scramble.

Breast Stroke Mark Likely.

While no team struggle will mark the women's events, the one record which seems to be on unstable ground will probably be shattered when blonde Margaret Hoffman, former Olympic swimmer, starts bobbing through the green waters. Holder of the second fastest 100-yard breast-stroke achievement in the country, one-fifth of a second behind the United States record, Miss Hoffman is favored to shatter her own District mark of 1:23 tonight. Her fastest time has been 1:19.

Nats Scent Win Over Cards With Buck Newsom on Mound

SARASOTA, Fla., March 26.—The Washington ball club moved back to Bradenton tonight to await its exhibition battle with the St. Louis Cardinals tomorrow.

Beaten three times in a row despite the fact that they have made 22 runs against enemy pitching in their last three games, the Nats scent a victory tomorrow when Buck Newson, their No. 1 pitcher, will take the mound against the Cardinals.

Washington pitchers in the club's last three games have permitted the opposition 33 runs, a display of ineffectiveness in which Newsom had no part. Newsom will pitch six innings against the Cardinals, Manager Bucky Harris announced, affirming that his ace right-hander suffered no serious injury when struck on his healing knee-cap in batting practice yesterday.

Dinner, Not Fight, Results When Dean And Newsom Meet

By a Staff Correspondent.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 26.—Dizzy Dean and Buck Newsom, twin screwballs of baseball, settled their differences over Dean's festive board here tonight.

The long expected meeting between the two pitchers, which, according to Newsom was to have resulted in much bloodshed, turned out to be something of a false alarm.

Dean made a number of cutting remarks about Newsom in an interview with Washington reporters last week in Tampa. When he learned of the statements Newsom swore revenge.

Tonight, while he was still swearing it, Newsom was invited to dinner by Dean. He returned wreathed in smiles and attested that it was all a mistake.

Rainstorm Halts Pinehurst Play

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—The third and fourth rounds of the $4,000 North and South Open golf championship were postponed until tomorrow after a rainstorm drenched the course and contestants and turned the bunkers into water hazards today.

Most of those who qualified for the last two rounds of the tournament had already gotten off the first tee when the storm broke. Rain came down in torrents and the tournament committee hastily sent buses out on the course to bring the players in.

Mates See Rydzewski Off to Olympic Trials

Rydzewski was accompanied by his coach, Eddie LaFond, and Joe Bunsa, a freshman boxer who will act as his second.

Eastern to Play All-Star Five In Prelim

Rinaldis, Globe Refiners to Battle in Main Attraction.

EASTERN HIGH, District scholastic champions, will meet a Government all-star team in the preliminary to the big battle between Globe Refiners, of McPherson, Kans., national A. A. U. basketball champions, and Rinaldi Tailors, Tuesday night, at Tech High School gymnasium.

Win Johnson, District A. A. U. basketball chairman, who negotiated for the game with the national champions, yesterday completed arrangements with Coach Charlie Guyon, Eastern High coach, and star players of Government teams.

The preliminary contest will start at 7:30 and the main attraction at 8:30.

Eastern, winner of 36 out of 40 games this season, will use its full strength against such aces as Ed Hargaden, former Georgetown University captain; Bob Freeman, former Penn captain; Jimmy Howell, former George Washington University star.

Globe Refiners, who have blazed a conquering path all season, and defeated Universal Pictures, of Hollywood, last Saturday night at Denver for the national A. A. U. crown, will leave McPherson tomorrow for the Nation's Capital. They are expected here Monday.

ORANGE GIN
TREMENDOUS TASTE SUCCESS

Never before has there been a liquor with a taste that appealed to everyone as amazingly as ORANGE GIN. Brown Feathers, $18.30, Wins by Head in Tropical Feature

Short Priced Horses Are Beaten

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 26.—Backers of short-priced horses were literally tearing out their hair here today. The Mermaid Handicap, one mile feature for fillies and mares, saw C. V. Whitney's two-time winner, Hollyhock, the second straight 4-to-5 shot to suffer defeat. The Blue Larkspur Miss raced with the trailers all the way in the six-horse field. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Brown Feathers, an $18.30 for $2 shot, won the event by a head.

Eddie Litzenberger, who had finished third astride the odds-on choice, Go Home, in the previous race, shoved the long shot to the front in the last jump. Miss A. Doris' Lady Higloss, placed on the outside because of her fractiousness at the gate, took the place by three lengths from E. R. Bradley's Bird Flower. Hollyhock beat one horse, the time was 1:38 flat.

Hollyhock was the fifth beaten favorite in six races.

Lady Higloss broke last but in motion from outside the stalls. She swept past Little Dinah to assume command entering the back stretch and drew into a two-length advantage, making Little Dinah stop. Bird Flower took a crack at the pacemaker, but she, too, had enough after a short stay in the runner-up position. Brown Feathers started her winning charge at the far turn. The Brown Bud filly circled the leaders with a steady rush and drew up to Lady Higloss in the last furlong, nipping that mare just as they came up to the wire.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NED'S AFFINITY, $8.40, $4.20, $3.40; MOLL, $3.50, $3.20; LITTLE DOLL, $7.80.

NED'S AFFINITY, hustled hard from the beginning, challenged the pacemaker strongly when approaching the homestretch, closed in determined style and was up in the last few strides. MOLL, rated in front and saving ground, continued with good energy when put to a hard drive, but failed to last long enough. LITTLE DOLL held a contending position from the start, saved ground entering the homestretch and outfinished CLAPHANDS in the closing drive.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 2:58½. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Winner, J. D. Spreckels III ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORNOCH, $5.50, $3.50, $2.50; SHEPHERD BOY, $8.60, $5.10; LAD HOCKBERGER, $4.30.

DORNOCH, on the inside while racing within striking distance of the leaders, rallied strongly when approaching the pacemaker, then closing stoutly after saving much ground, drew out in the closing sixteenth. SHEPHERD BOY, going in his best form, raced TOANO and LADY HOCKBERGER into submission, but bore out at stretch turn and tired fast in the last quarter-mile. LADY HOCKBERGER raced in the first flight all the way and held on courageously in the closing test.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old fillies and maidens. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:33. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREY SHOT, $15.30, $6.00, $3.50; CATHY P., $8.20, $3.70; LUCKY DUCKY, $2.50.

GREY SHOT, away quickly and having good speed, shook off strong contention from LUCKY DUCKY after going three furlongs, opened up a clear lead entering the homestretch and drew out smartly nearing the finish. CATHY P. went in the first flight and came willingly under punishment in the closing stages. LUCKY DUCKY was hard ridden all the way and had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:06. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. M. Eckman's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH TORQUE, $19.00, $7.40, $4.00; CHIRAC, $3.20, $2.40; SCOTCH QUEEN, $3.10.

HIGH TORQUE, hurried into the lead after breaking fast, was steadied while saving ground, rallied nicely when put to strong urging and outstayed CHIRAC when the final test came. CHIRAC forced a steady pace from the beginning, made repeated bids and held on gamely until the close. SCOTCH QUEEN moved up strongly approaching the homestretch while racing on the outside, weakened and finished on the outside when straightened into the homestretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs; allowances. Granada purse, $800. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:41½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Robert L. Gerry's ch. g. MISS OTIS	(Rose)	105	5	1	3²	2½	3¹	5	4.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCER, $17.60, $7.90, $2.70; MAXINE F., $7.00, $2.60; GO HOME, $2.20.

CHANCER, going in remarkably improved form, had good speed to move into the lead in the early stages, withstood stout contention from GO HOME and MISS OTIS in the first five furlongs, then holding on stubbornly for the final drive, barely lasted to stall off MAXINE F. Latter, bad order for the first half-mile, swung to the outside when in full stride and was wearing the winner down rapidly at close. GO HOME, pinched back leaving the backstretch while lapped with the leaders, moved up strongly entering the homestretch, but had too much taken out of him and he faltered suddenly right at end.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Mermaid Handicap. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Went to post at 5:13. Off at 5:16. Start good. Won driving; place same. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROWN FEATHERS, $18.30, $8.50, $7.00; LADY HIGLOSS, $4.40, $3.10; BIRD FLOWER, $8.00.

BROWN FEATHERS, racing kindly and showing improvement, entered contention midway of the backstretch, wore LADY HIGLOSS down entering the homestretch, but had to be hard ridden to last long enough. LADY HIGLOSS, taken to the outside for the start, displaced LITTLE DINAH when straightened into the backstretch, lost command at the stretch turn, but held on gamely until the close. BIRD FLOWER made a strong bid leaving the backstretch, but weakened in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:49. Off at 5:50. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Robert W. Collins' b. c. U. S. Writ Forbids SEC To Publish Salaries

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today enjoined the Securities Exchange Commission from making public the salaries of officers and employes of the National Biscuit Co., P. Lorillard Co. and Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., or revealing "other confidential information," pending a hearing on a suit attacking the constitutionality of the securities exchange act.

The injunction was granted on the appeal of the three firms from the commission's ruling of last January that "confidential information" they submitted under protest was of "public interest" and would be revealed.

Realizing Checks Soaring of Cotton

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Early advances were followed by reactions in cotton today with the close barely steady, net 6 points higher to 7 points lower. Near months were relatively firm.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 4 points. Continued trade buying in old-crop positions carried prices to the highest levels touched since last January. This attracted realizing, and prices eased in the late trading in sympathy with the easier ruling of the afternoon stock market.

Industry Dips For February, But Leads 1935

Construction, Auto and Steel Trades Show Declines.

New York, March 26.—Industrial activity again declined in February, according to the regular monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Output remained higher, however, than during the first half of 1935, and some further improvement was noted during the first two weeks of March.

Greater-than-seasonal declines took place in the construction, automobile, steel and textile industries. Bituminous coal output advanced 5 per cent, compared with a usual seasonal decline of about 8 per cent at this time of year. Electric power output remained about the same as in January. Domestic orders for machine tool equipment again reached a new high level for the recovery period.

Despite abnormally cold weather, retail trade was well sustained during the month. The physical volume of department store sales was about 3.5 per cent higher than in January, contrasted with a usual seasonal rise of only 1 per cent. The value of rural sales advanced about 5.5 per cent, compared with a usual seasonal rise of about 9.3 per cent. Wholesale prices and prices of farm products remained substantially unchanged.

Retail prices declined about 1 per cent and the cost of living fell 0.5 per cent. The number of commercial failures was 15 per cent lower than in February, 1935, while the liabilities of the failing companies were 25 per cent lower than a year ago.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in Moderate Trading; Motor Shares Lead; Foreign Money Weak.

New York, March 26.—Confidence in the security markets expanded and higher prices were the rule in moderate trading. A feature was a good rise in Government bonds. Profit-taking restrained the advance in stocks, but the tone remained cheerful. May wheat was down an eighth of a cent at 96¾ cents a bushel.

Announcement by the Federal Reserve Board that the old complicated system of figuring margin requirements had been scrapped, and a saner method of requiring a straight percentage on stock value substituted, was well received. No liquidation because of the setting of a 55 per cent margin requirement, or giving stocks a loan value of 45 per cent of their price, took place, because the new regulation, when it goes into effect, will apply only to new purchases. Stocks bought under the old rule had, in a great many cases, a much lower margin requirement than a straight 55 per cent, because of the use of the 1933 low price as maximum loan figure, with certain restrictions.

More Sensible Rules.

After a time the new rule may promote speculation on margin, for the old rules restraining "pyramiding"—i. e., the use of paper increase in stock value for the purchase of additional stock—will not apply. Per contra, the actual cash which the trader must put up will be greater, and presumably the Federal Reserve Board will from time to time, if it considers speculation dangerous, increase the straight margin requirement.

At this time the new rule will be useful mainly in relieving brokers and bankers of an enormous amount of work in following the complicated calculations necessary under the old margin rules. The stock market, although it has risen with little interruption for a year, has not been pushed up on borrowed money. The lifting force has come from purchases for long-term investment and from a flow of capital, foreign and domestic, seeking insurance against inflation.

Now that the Federal fiscal policy appears a bit less radical; that the dollar and commodity prices have in effect held steady for a long time, and now that the stock market has again caught the eye of the speculating public, its course in future may be determined by purely speculative forces to a much greater extent than has been true of the past year.

In foreign exchange the further decline in francs kept to the fore the question of devaluation. Most currencies were down against the dollar, but the war news appeared to be only an indirect influence. Distrust centered in the fiscal position of France on the basis of the franc's present value. Yen were weak, probably from border troubles with the Soviets.

Motor Shares Bought.

In stocks the market for the motor shares acted as though all doubts as to the character of spring sales of motor cars had been resolved. Along with talk of first quarter earnings above expectations brokerage houses buzzed with optimistic predictions of second quarter results. General Motors was bid up to a new high price, making the advance since the beginning of the week a good 4 points. Chrysler rose more than a point and Yellow Truck finally hit 20 on large volume.

Railroad shares, neglected recently, gave the best performance in more than two weeks. Gains ran from a fraction to more than 2 points. Delaware & Hudson, which had no extremely heavy flood losses, was the leader. Central and Southern Pacific were the most active. Fractional gains were the rule for the public utilities. Foreign Power issues rose to new high prices. Metal shares came forward in the late trading. Chemical climbed quickly, as did du Pont. Steels and oils were irregular.

Stiff Margins.

In one of the banks the guess was hazarded that the public did not yet realize that almost twice as much value in stocks would have to be put up May 1 to secure collateral loans as is now required under established customs. There was some conjecture whether speculators might take more of an interest in bonds, which may still be used as collateral without restriction as to margin, and there was much interest in the question of whether unlisted security dealers were exempt from restriction upon their credit lines at their banks.

Odds and Ends.

How braintrusters are made: "New men," according to a writer in a New Deal publication, "who know the public mind and public opinion are being trained in the universities to fill places created by the new condition." . . . Fairbanks Co. stocks are under investigation by the SEC. . . . What has become of the other investigations? . . . The layman probably is a bit dizzy from reading of some large copper companies proposing a price increase and others opposing it. If he isn't he may wonder what it is all about when he reads one day of the bringing into production of huge new supplies of oil in the Southwest and the next day of rumors of a rise in Midcontinent oil prices.

Ticker Ticks.

Fairbanks shares weakened on the inquiry . . . A handful of stocks were pushed up 1 to 3 points, partly on new operations and partly on the rebound from recent falls. Among them were Amerada, American Shipbuilding, International Printing Ink, United Dyeworth, Congoleum, Clark Equipment, Checker Cab and People's Drug . . . Stock turnover again failed to reach 2,000,000 shares . . . Kennecott's earnings were known in the brokerage houses. The report is expected for tomorrow . . . Current interest in Canadian mining shares is rather small.

New Taxes.

Congressmen apparently are beginning to feel some faint suspicion of opposition of importance to the proposed corporation surplus taxes. It is being made clear that the bill now drawn up in the House will be subject to change as a result of hearings. The latest move is to include railroads in the provisions. What is hardest to understand is the easy assurance of Congressmen, taking their cue from the President, on the amounts that will be raised under the new taxes. Much enlightenment for the country is promised when the hearings begin, although some people are pessimistic enough to fear that a bad bill may go through anyway.

Bank Stock Loans.

The loan margin regulations imposed upon banks affect only such shares as are dealt in on a national security exchange. Loans against unlisted bank stocks to dealers or investors do not come within the purview of Section I of regulation U. Those dealers not members of an exchange who held positions in individual shares at present do not have to worry about augmenting the capital with which to do business after May 1.

Fleming Opens Bank Parley At Memphis

A. B. A. President Says New Act Settles Major Banking Legislation.

Memphis, Tenn., March 26.—Expressing confidence in the fairness of the American people, when properly informed, Robert V. Fleming, President American Bankers' Association, called upon bankers to explain to their customers and others the special conditions under which banks must operate as compared with other businesses, in his opening address here today at the Southern Conference on Banking Service. The meeting is being held at the Hotel Peabody under the auspices of the association with the co-operation of Memphis bankers.

"I think it most important that each banker explore fully the possibilities of making bankable such requests for banking services as are presented in unbankable form," he said. "If examination discloses that the service applied for cannot be made bankable then I think it is our distinct duty to explain as clearly as possible to the customer the reasons why we cannot render the service. To follow such a policy requires time and effort on our part, but I am sure it will be appreciated by the great majority of the public and a better understanding between bankers and their customers will result."

Mr. Fleming expressed the belief that "the passage of the banking act of 1935 settled for the present the question of major banking legislation, and that bankers can now turn their attention more to the problems of how they can develop and extend the scope of banking service."

Miss Fogle Heads Bank Women'sClub

Wheat Price Back From Deep Decline

Market at Chicago Operates as If Oversold.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 26.—Acting as if in an oversold condition, wheat rallied at the last today after declining earlier to a new low price record for the season.

A bullish circumstance was that no important stop-loss selling of wheat holdings took place on price downturns, and it was pointed out that there had now been ten days of almost continuous declines.

Today's transient weakness of the market went hand in hand with tentative estimates current indicating probability of a 1936 domestic wheat yield large enough to insure a liberal exportable surplus.

Arnold Served Workers Wine, He Tells Board

Champagne Given Employe Before Dismissal, He Says at Hearing.

Hearings before the National Labor Relations Board on the complaint the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. dismissed 20 of its employes for joining a newly organized union, closed yesterday with the revelation some of the men were treated to champagne and liquor by Leon Arnold, president of the concern, less than a week before they were discharged.

Arnold testified it was not unusual for him to call some of the men into his office after working hours for a few drinks of liquor. The serving of champagne in his office the Saturday before March 6, when the men were fired, was a "coincidence" he explained.

One of the men said he never had tasted champagne so Arnold, who happened to have a bottle in his car, ordered it brought in and opened, he testified.

Several other "coincidences" were cited by the witnesses in attempting to refute charges against the bus company.

George Wilsey, shop superintendent of the company, said the fact that the men were fired within a few days after company officials learned of the formation of the union, and the appearance of an advertisement in the newspapers for mechanics, cleaners and helpers, was "a coincidence."

The men were fired, he stated, for inefficiency and incompetency that had been prevalent for several months and "was steadily growing worse."

Busses were dirty, breakdowns in the service were frequent and the men "huddled around" during working hours, he declared.

Joseph Arnold, vice president of the company, testified that he had been invited to attend a union meeting early in March at the home of Theodore Frederick, day foreman of the shop, who later was discharged. Arnold said he wore a driver's cap at the meeting because he could not find his own hat.

Assisting Jacob Blum, regional lawyer for the board, in presenting the case against the company, was Arthur Reyman, attorney for the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railways and Motor Coach Operators, Local 1079.

Hauptmann

posed to have been cut there were 23 perpendicular nails.

"The State expert, Mr. Kohler, explained that it was probable that the board was the first to be laid and for that reason was driven tight."

Hauck, in his statement, described the examination, and said that it was necessary to take several of the joists to a Columbia University laboratory when it was found that nails slipped into the holes of the ladder rail when it was laid on the joists would not sink deeply enough into place.

Some of those present, Hauck said, regarded this as very strange, whereupon Wilentz and Hauck insisted the joists be examined. So they were cut out and taken over to the university, where they were split along the nail holes.

The Governor and Hauptmann's chief counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, were present when this was done.

The splitting of the wood, Hauck said, disclosed a foreign woody substance inserted in the nail hole. When that was taken into consideration the nail holes showed themselves to be of normal depth.

Hauck said he asked the Governor if he felt that anything was wrong, and Hoffman replied, "I'm satisfied."

The Governor, in his statement, referred to the depth of the holes and the presence of woody substances.

"The defense," he said, "maintains that this is indicative that these holes were made recently and not at the time the house was constructed. It was pointed out that the evidence of fibrous material shows the hole to be driven recently while clear-cut holes result after a nail has been in the wood for a long period."

In another part of his statement the Governor said the examination brought to light "the fact that from the center of the attic floor there were 13 boards on one side, while with the disputed board there would have been 14 on the other side."

Requested Secrecy.

Hauck said the Governor had requested secrecy about the visit to the Bronx, but that when they appeared there they discovered Fulton Oursler, magazine publisher; Capt. George H. Maines and Prof. Louis Hazelton, of the Stevens Institute of Technology, as well as others.

The Governor asked Koehler some questions about rail 16 when they got to the attic.

"Suddenly the Governor brought out some throat swab sticks and placed them in the rails through the holes," Hauck said. "Then he asked Sergt. Lewis Bornmann of the State police if the nails in the board had been driven flush with the surface. Bornmann replied that they had. At this, the Governor said, in effect, 'look at the depth now. It looks funny.' (Hauck indicated the depth was less than half an inch.)

"The Governor inferred that Koehler and Bornmann had given out something funny previous to the trial.

"Several of the Governor's investigators have been in there since the prosecution was there, among them Dr. Erasmus M. Hudson, a defense witness at the trial."

Injected Half Inch.

"The small wire would only go in half an inch, and you might draw the conclusion that the board was never nailed to the floor," he said.

"The Governor suggested that the joist be cut and examined. A carpenter was called and the joist at the points where the holes were sawed off and taken to Columbia University by the entire party, except Attorney General Wilentz, who returned home."

At the university, G. B. Pegram, dean of the department of physics, provided Koehler and Loney with a laboratory in which to split the joists to verify the finding. Lincoln T. Work, assistant professor of engineering, was summoned as a disinterested person to rule on the conclusion of the laboratory tests. Loney insisted the floorboard was framed, but every hole showed a peculiar situation. When the joist was split, in the bottom of each hole was a blockage of wooden material."

Hauck said there were 13 holes investigated, one of which did not show this condition, but the conferees agreed that had been made by a bent nail and that another nail immediately adjacent had been driven.

"The professors and the Governor were convinced the reason why the wire did not go down was because some foreign body was present.

"The Governor replied, 'Yes, I'm satisfied Bornmann and Koehler told the truth when they said the board was nailed to the joist.'

Same Measurements.

"Koehler had his original record (the notes made when he studied the wood) and these showed exactly the same measurements as did the blocks when they were split at the laboratory."

Hauck explained when consideration was given for the alleged foreign substance the depths of the nail holes were the same as recorded by Koehler.

"After the test in the attic, the group went to the second floor and the Governor quizzed Bornmann closely, asking him if he framed rail 16, pointing out that it meant a man's life."

Bornmann denied framing anything, Hauck said, and insisted the board had fitted flush to the joists with the nails in place and that he "had nothing to hide."

"As prosecutor of the pleas, I am getting sick and tired of the Governor's actions in this case," Hauck said. "Today's incident has made it reach the limit.

"If the Governor insists on any contention that the State's case was framed, I feel that we should not longer try to co-operate with him."

New Zeppelin Delayed On Propaganda Tour

Friedrichshafen, Germany, March 26 (AP).—Germany's new pride of the air, the giant Zepplin Von Hindenburg, took off late today to join a Nazi propaganda tour for Sunday's Reichstag election after an accident delayed her departure for several hours.

The huge craft when emerging this morning from the Loewenthal hangar was struck by a squall and her stern was forced to the ground. This damaged the truncated vertical stabilizer, which was repaired in two hours. Gusty winds made it advisable, however, to hold her down until late in the day.

The Von Hindenburg is to make a joint nonstop four-day flight around Germany with its mate, the Graf Zeppelin.

BAKER.

FOR the purpose of aiding flood relief work, two gala dances are announced for next Thursday night under auspices of the various Government employe welfare associations, with the entire proceeds to be donated to the American Red Cross.

Wardman Park Hotel and the Shoreham Hotel will be the scene of the entertainments, according to W. J. Carmack (F), Farm Credit Administration, who is taking a leading part in arranging the affairs.

Tickets will be $1 and will be honored at either hotel, Mr. Carmack says, who points out that the hotels have agreed to turn over all their facilities to the project without charge.

Phil Lampkin and his Loew's Fox dance orchestra will play at the Wardman Park Hotel, while Barnee and his orchestra are scheduled for the Shoreham.

Officers and members of all welfare associations throughout the Government service are urged by Mr. Carmack to contact him for tickets and information, at FCA, District 1050, Branch 408.

The dances will be from 10:30 to 1:30, the late hours being selected in order to attract large numbers of after-theater parties.

A playoff for second place is scheduled between Agriculture and the Argonne Marines, first leg and second leg runners up, respectively.

The Government Printing Office team won top honors this half in section 2 and will play the Ag-War winners in section 2 the first half.

E. P. Brooke (C) and L. R. Watson (C) won the pair championship for the year, with W. A. Corley and Benton Brooks second.

Play on the last night saw the Prospectors, Ag-War and Argonne Marines winning in their respective sections. High pairs were:

Reich Asked to Allay Fears

"peace was in the balance." He said he felt that these proposals allayed the "immediate prospects of steps being taken which might have led to war."

"If the House will weigh the danger of war against this document," he continued, "I am convinced their judgment will be the same as that of the government, which was that it was worthwhile."

Eden, speaking only from notes, but with unusual vigor, said if success is to crown the coming negotiations, Germany must be ready to make a contribution.

"None has been forthcoming save the chancellor's offer not to increase the number of troops that originally entered the zone," he said. "While I am ready to admit the importance of that offer"—Eden paused for emphasis—"frankly, in the present international situation, it is not enough.

Discloses Refusal.

"If in addition to that the German government would give an undertaking that for the period of the negotiations it would not fortify the zone—that would give us something to work with. But I am informed that even that undertaking it is not possible for the German government to give."

A murmur ran around the house as Eden disclosed Germany's refusal.

"Military pacts," the World War premier asserted, "precipitated the war of 1914 and will do it again if you enter one."

He said the country is "disturbed" over the military part of plans of the Locarno powers, and demanded that there be no automatic military operations binding great Britain.

After sketching dramatically the events of 1914, Lloyd George, his white hair shaking, declared with bitter irony that Britain, which now talks about its Locarno signature, was not honoring its war debts agreement with the United States.

"Mr. Baldwin went to the United States and signed a treaty to pay so much a year off our debt," he continued, "but Great Britain is not doing that. Why, it is an essential principle of the law of nations that no power can liberate itself from engagements nor modify the stipulations thereof, except with the consent of the other contracting party. Has America consented? Here is a breach of a fundamental principle."

Lloyd George emphasized that he was not defending Hitler's breaking of the Locarno Treaty. He said there was a greater crime, "his greatest offense was that in the inflammatory condition of Europe he should have committed so reckless an act.

"He organized a torchlight procession through a powder magazine and there has been very nearly a very shattering explosion."

Sir Austen Chamberlain, the next speaker, defended Britain's obligations with the United States. "No person or country can be bound to fulfill the impossible," he said.

The Labor party, through Hugh Dalton, its spokesman, opened an attack upon the Locarno program, saying the plan to have British and Italian soldiers patrol the Rhineland was "fantastic and absurd."

Premier Mussolini, Dalton said, apparently has treated "with silent contempt" the proposal for consultations of the general staff of the Locarno powers and the name England was "hissed" at a recent meeting of the Italian Senate.

Eden asserted: "The proposals from Germany which are to come next week will be received with an open mind and with a keen desire to make the best use of them that we can in order to bring about a permanent pacification of Europe," adding:

"We cannot assure peace unless the French government is ready to approach with an open mind the problems which still separate them from Germany.

Plan Seen Failure.

Paris, March 26 (AP).—French officials said today that declarations before the British House of Commons appeared to make impossible the French program to punish Germany for reoccupying the Rhineland.

Their comment came shortly after Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, had explained his country's position in the Locarno discussion to the lower parliamentary chamber.

Officials here said German rejection of the Locarno suggestions makes necessary a new effort to build a new framework for European peace.

Hitler Praises Power.

Leipzig, Germany, March 26 (AP).—Adolf Hitler praised Germany's power to get what she wanted through her own might rather than from "chance or a gift from the League of Nations" tonight in his ninth election speech.

Anyone today, he said, would have to admit that four or five years ago he did not believe it possible to attain so many objectives in so short a time.

"One could not believe then that today we would have once again an army, an airfleet and full sovereignty over German soil."

Allegany Five Beats Cumberland High 41-40

Cumberland, Md., March 26.—Capt. Jack Read flipped in a field goal from a corner 10 seconds before the final whistle to give Allegany High School's basketeers a 41-40 triumph over the Cumberland Cloakers, Interstate League champions, at Campobello before 300 persons.

High scoring honors went to "Red" Miller, who garnered 15 points, including six field goals. Capt. Read made ten points to set the pace for A. H. S. It was Allegany's twenty-third win in 28 games played this season.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor, in Constitution Hall Thursday afternoon. Program: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor (Bach), "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" (Mozart), Symphony No. 8 in B minor (Schubert), Jota Aragonesa (Albeniz), "Gymopedies" Nos. 1 and 3 (Satie-Debussy), Polka and Fugue from "Svanda Dudak" (Weinberger).

One hopes that yesterday's audience included all those persons who had intimated to Dr. Kindler that they would like to hear once more the compositions which made up the program. For there is a particular delectation in hearing what one wants to hear when one wants to hear it, just as there can be excessive boredom in the opposite situation. There was probably little of the weariness of dissatisfaction at this concert, since each of the items was intrinsically interesting.

The Bach passacaglia and fugue is one of those monumental works of which one never tires because of its perfect structural proportions. The strength and dignity of the design have a tranquilizing effect upon the beholder whose aesthetic sense is at the same time quickened by the inventive skill displayed in the details of the decorative scheme. It is an architectural masterpiece in which every line contributes to its majesty, and every arabesque is exactly related to the quadrature of the plan.

Mozart's serenade is always delightful, and so infectious is its animation that it can dispel the blackest of moods. Yet its magic is most potent when it is played in such a nocturnal setting as the one for which the composer wrote it. Those who have heard it in the courtyard of the Residenz in Salzburg, discoursed by musicians whose stands were illuminated by candles, while the moonlight glowed upon pillar and arch, can testify to its immemorial beauty.

The B minor symphony of Schubert would give him earthly immortality had he never written another line, and the more one ponders upon the mystery of its loveliness the more one is convinced that he refrained from adding more to it because he could think of nothing more to say. The inspiration faded, the creative impulse spent its force, the pen faltered a few bars of the scherzo, and dropped from his hand. Why try to complete the formal pattern of a work which was finished in the deepest and most significant sense?

Picturesqueness prevailed in the latter half of the program, with the scintillant Aragonese jota of Albeniz, the pseudo-classicism of Satie's ironical little dances, and the uproarious gayety of the excerpts from Weinberger's "Svanda Dudak." No stronger contrast could have been devised than that between the full-blooded vitality of Weinberger's music and the pallid anemia of Satie's conceits, rouged though they were by Debussy's deft brush.

Essay Contest On Holyland Is Continued

Deadline for Contestants Set Back Three Days Upon Request.

The deadline for entrants in The Post's essay contest for school children in and around Washington on the subject "What I Liked Best at the Holy Land Exhibit" has been postponed from noon on Saturday, March 28, to Tuesday, March 31, at the same time.

So many requests have come from school children and their teachers, who have not yet had an opportunity to view the exhibit at Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest, which is being sponsored by The Washington Post for the benefit of Children's Hospital, that the contest editor has decided that it is only fair to allow the three extra days.

The exhibit is open daily from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. On Sunday the hours are from 1 p. m. until 5:30 p. m. and from 7 until 11 in the evening. Admissions are 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children under 12 years of age.

Yesterday, 70 sixth and seventh grade boys and girls from the Cottage City, Md., school visited the exhibit, accompanied by Mrs. Jennie James, vice principal of the school, and Mrs. G. Kaufman, one of the teachers.

The group arrived when the exhibit opened in the morning and remained for nearly two hours to thoroughly inspect the Holy Land replica which depicts 124 Palestinian scenes with more than 2,000 tiny figures in miniature, grouped to reproduce important Biblical episodes. As usual, the most popular features of the exhibit with the Cottage City group were the scenes which, by ingenuous lighting arrangements, show the Holy Land at sunset, under moonlight and at night, with all of the dwellings and buildings in the various towns and villages of Palestine lighted by hundreds of miniature lights.

Attendance records for the period since the exhibit opened a week ago were again broken yesterday. Each day has found a larger number of men, women and children from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia visiting this remarkable replica of the country where Christ lived and which has been constructed, after several years of labor, by the two brothers, Salvatore and Josef Gauci, and exhibited in cities all over the United States and Canada.

Forts Discussion Hinges on Treaty

London, March 26 (U.P.).—The United States today made discussion of Pacific fortifications conditional upon Japan's willingness to sign the Anglo-Franco-American naval limitations treaty concluded at St. James Palace yesterday.

Officials revealed that Great Britain recently approached the American delegation to the naval conference with an informal proposal to discuss prolongation of Article 19 o fthe Washington Treaty of 1922 creating Pacific zones in which fortifications were banned.

Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation, provisionally declined to discuss the British proposal.

There was every indication, however, that should Japan sign yesterday's naval treaty, at any time in the future, the United States might be prepared to reconsider Pacific fortificatoins at such places as Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines.

Austrian Firm Reveals 50 Million Shortage

Vienna, March 26 (AP).—Dr. Ludwig Draxler, minister of finance, revealed a shortage of more than $50,000,000 today in the reserve fund of the Austrian life insurance company, the Phoenix.

Disclosure of the predicament of the company—Austria's largest insurance firm — yesterday led to promulgation of a government emergency decree to prevent its breakdown.

Asked the reason for the shortage, Dr. Draxler said: "Too optimistic speculation in a poor country."

The finance minister repeated his assurance that the federal treasury was not involved, but it was said in financial circles the company had liberally underwritten recent federal loans. Dr. Draxler said a loan of 250,000,000 schillings (about $47,150,000) was being floated to replenish the reserve.

Move to Indict Loring Slayer Denied by Itzel

Rumors of Jury Action Discounted as Inquiry Is Discontinued.

Lieut. Joseph Itzel, of the Baltimore police department, chief investigator of the Loring murder case, last night denied rumors that an indictment would be sought from the county grand jury which convenes April 6.

"The investigation has not been dropped," he said, "but there is nothing at present to be placed before the Prince Georges County grand jury."

The rumor that the slayer of Corinna Loring, 27-year-old public stenographer, whose body was found garrotted on Saddleback Ridge, was at bay, emanated from Mount Rainier.

It became current after it was known that Itzel had made a brief visit to Upper Marlboro several days ago, followed by numerous visits to Washington and vicinity. Tuesday night Chief Eugene Plumer and Sergt. George Giddens, of the Mount Rainier police force, visited Itzel at his home in Baltimore.

Charges of inefficient trollery car service in Prince Georges County will be laid before the Maryland Public Utilities Commission, it was decided by a group of citizens who met at Riverdale Wednesday night.

The citizens, who represented every town located on the Washington-Bladensburg line, set Wednesday, April 8, as the day on which the formal charges will be drawn up. Presentation to the commission will be made as soon as possible after that.

The allegations will declare that early in the morning and after 5 o'clock in the afternoon a great deal of time is lost going from the county's metropolitan area to the center of Washington.

According to statements at Wednesday's meeting, the estimated time from Riverdale to the Treasury Department is 40 minutes. Actually, the citizens say, it takes 1½ hours.

A number of nearby Maryland residents are planning to move into Washington because of this, it was said, while others will probably hesitate to settle in the county. Such would tend to handicap the real estate business.

The citizens also will recommend the inauguration of express cars from downtown Washington to the suburbs. Their complaint on this score is that cars are filled with local passengers shortly after leaving the starting point at the Treasury.

Those met in Riverdale as guests of the town council were W. H. Vanneman, H. A. Bates and J. T. Deuver, of Mount Rainier; F. M. Golden, T. S. Jarrall and R. T. Plitt, of Hyattsville; Mayor George M. Lucas and Martin S. Miller, of North Brentwood; T. R. Burch, Berwyn; C. L. Sayre, Beltsville.

Dr. C. P. Close and Walter Green represented College Park; Mayor W. A. Mahaffey, John McClery and E. W. Baker, Brentwood; Mayor W. A. Carson, R. P. Crothers, J. A. Krause and T. W. Vanneman, Riverdale. Mayor Carson acted as chairman of the meeting.

On the Air Today

WHEN we get a little blase about our radio these days it's rather nice to sit back a moment and consider how remarkable it is after all. Bea Lillie forms the case at hand. Playing at the National this week, Miss Lillie also is under contract to contribute to radio's "Red Horse Tavern."

Now Miss Lillie certainly cannot appear before a Washington audience at 8:30 and on a New York radio show the preceding half hour. So it's all very neatly (and the engineers will tell you—simply) worked out by means of the old-fashioned ear-phones.

It may be a bit uncertain for Miss Lillie but the situation requires that she settle herself down in WJSV's studios, phones to her ears, and catch her cues from the cast in the New York studios without the benefit of seeing and working with them. She will be supported, however, by a 10-piece orchestra under the direction of Mayflower's Sidney.

"The Red Horse Tavern" is heard Friday nights, at 8, from WJSV. Next week Miss Lillie does her turn from Toronto.

• • • • •

No sir, Annabelle, I'm sorry but Wells Church, at WJSV, reports no one will be permitted in the studios for Miss Lillie's radio half hour. Frankly, I think it is quite proper. I wouldn't want anyone over my shoulder either, if I were catching cues by earphones.

• • • • •

According to word by the Associated Press radio scout, Stoopnagle and Budd will substitute for Fred Allen in "Town Hall Tonight" this summer, while Allen vacations. The arrangement will run two months.

• • • • •

Now that the Irish sweepstakes drawings are all over and several hundreds of thousands of the citizenry are disappointed at not receiving a fortune for a couple of dollars, it seems rather like a severe anticlimax to find the running of the Grand National on the air this morning. WMAL picks up the cloppity-cloppity at 9:50; WJSV, at 9:30. Commentators will be R. C. Lyle and W. Hobbiss, N. B. C. experts in this branch of sports. Perhaps as interesting as any other aspect of the short-wave airing will be an opportunity to compare British and American sports broadcasts.

• • • • •

Texas today steals a lot of thunder from the District of Columbia. Ground-breaking ceremonies of the $1,500,000 San Jacinto Memorial shaft will be aired by WMAL at 2. The shaft, commemorating the battle of San Jacinto, will be taller than the Washington Monument! Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC; Gov. Allred and Col. A. J. Houston, son of Gen. Sam Houston, will be heard.

• • • •

Features today:

"Father of the Constitution:" By G. W. U. Players, WMAL, at 7:30.

Culbertson on Bridge

Vive La France.

My immediate feeling when an opponent dashes my hopes with a brilliant coup is that it virtually is robbery for one's opponents to play so well. This reaction is as human as it is deplorable. But soon, I am glad to say, I can look at things with a less jaundiced eye. My bridge sense comes to the fore and lets me sincerely admire the workmanship, no matter who was the craftsman.

The immediate cause of all this philosophizing, if it is philosophy, is the following hand, played by Pierre Albarran, one of Europe's most brilliant players, during a recent series of match games. His partner was Sophocle Venizelos; mine, Richard L. Frey. Since Albarran is French, Venizelos, Greek, and I am half Russian and half Scotch, these games had a decidedly international flavor.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	1 heart	Double	Pass
1 spade	Pass	4 Sp. (final bid)

South's bids were shaded, but well justified by his excellent distribution.

I sat West and was decidedly tempted to double the final contract, but restrained myself with the conviction that the hand must be of a "freakish" nature.

The club king was my opening lead. When I saw the dummy I was both disappointed and relieved. Disappointed in that it looked like a tough job to defeat the contract; relieved that I hadn't walked into a redouble. Of course, I couldn't realize that with South's none-too-robust four-card trump suit he had a tortuous road to follow. After the club king I shifted to the king of diamonds. South won the ace and ruffed a diamond with a low trump in dummy. When I followed with the six to this trick, South "placed" me with the Q 10 remainder. My first overcall, and opening lead evidence of at least three clubs, together with the count of four diamonds in my hand, satisfied Albarran that I had, at most, one spade, and since he desperately needed entries to his own hand, and also since the percentages favored the play, he finessed the nine of trump on the next lead from dummy. When it held he ruffed another diamond with the king of spades, while East discarded a heart. A second trump lead was won by his ten spot. And then he made the really brilliant play of the hand. He led a low diamond and, when I played the queen, he allowed me to hold the trick!

East discarded his last heart, but I now was helpless. If I led the ace of clubs, dummy would ruff, declarer return to his own hand by trumping a heart, pick up West's last spade, and win the balance of the tricks with two good diamonds and the queen of clubs. As I underbid the club South would let it ride to his queen, ruff his last club in dummy and proceed as before. If I led the ace of hearts South would ruff and lead his good diamonds, allowing East to trump. Dummy's last trump is used to ruff a club and South's last club is discarded on the king of hearts.

Actually I led the jack of hearts, dummy played the king, East ruffed and South overruffed. South then cashed two diamonds and trumped a club, conceding the last trick to West.

Note what happens if South trumps that fourth round of diamonds. East overtrumps, returns the jack of clubs and the other two club tricks set the hand immediately. Albarran's play of this hand was as fine as I ever have seen, and I don't want to see many like it in the future, at least not from the opponents' side of the table.

General Westover Lectures Tonight

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, who is a flyer of note, will lecture tonight (Friday) to members of the National Geographic Society, at Constitution Hall, on Army aeronautics and some of his experiences in aviation.

Gen. Westover, for years an expert pilot, usually flies his own plane on his inspection tours of Army air bases. He was the winner of the national elimination free balloon race in 1922, and in the same year was chosen as the United States Army's entrant in the international balloon race held at Geneva, Switzerland.

Kindler Declines Cleveland Offer

Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, yesterday announced he had declined an invitation to conduct the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra in a series of seven concerts this summer.

The Cleveland Orchestra which this year embarks on its first season of outdoor concerts, had sought the services of the popular Washington conductor, who made last year's National Symphony concerts in the Capital so successful.

In declining the invitation Dr. Kindler said he still hoped that a series of summer concerts could be arranged for the National Symphony in Washington.
